THE SIEGE OF CHARLESTON.

A Second Assault on Fort Wagner on the 18th.

Repulse of Gen. Gillmore's Forces.

Desperate Bravery of the Assaulting Party.

The Interior of the Fort Gained, but Not Held.

Our Loss About 1,500 Killed, Wounded and Missing.

GENS. SEYMOUR AND STRONG WOUNDED

The Siege Operations Still Progressing.

The United States steam transport Arago, HENRY A. GADSDEN, commanding, from Port Royal, S. C., at 10:30 A. M., and Charleston Bar at 5 P. M., on Thursday, July 23, arrived at this port yesterday afternoon, bringing 100 first, and 172 second class, passengers, the usual mails, and having the prize steamer Emma in tow.

The intelligence by the Arago confirms the telegrams already published from rebel sources, respecting the second assault upon Fort Wagner, on Morris Island, by Gen. GILLMORE'S forces and the monitors, mortar schooners and gunboats under Admiral DAHLGREN.

After the first unsuccessful assault on the 10th inst., Gen. GILLMORE lost no time in throwing up batteries on Morris Island, within 800 yards of Fort Wagner, in order to reduce it by siege. On the morning of the 18th, twelve or fifteen heavy guns were in position, beside eight or ten mortars. Gen. GILLMORE, therefore, determined to commence the attack, which was opened at 11 o'clock A. M.

The bombardment was conducted in a spirited manner, GILMORE'S batteries initiating the work, and Admiral DAHLGREN'S five monitors, the Ironsides, too mortar schooners and three wooden gunboats, quickly joining in the engagement.

The enemy replied briskly from Fort Wagner and Battery Bee, just beyond the Cumming's Point, while Fort Sumter kept up a sharp fire from the guns of her southwestern face, among which were two rifled pieces of heavy calibre. Most of the fire of the rebels was directed upon the Monitors and other naval vessels, only an occasional shell being sent towards the batteries. Although the iron-clads were repeatedly struck, they suffered very little real damage, and the only losses in the batteries were a Lieutenant of the Seventy-sixth Pennsylvania regiment, who was killed by a chance shot, and the wounding of six of the gunners.

Soon after 4 o'clock the firing from Fort Wagner ceased. It was then known that our brave fellows had succeeded in dismounting one gun, and it was also pretty well ascertained that another of the rebel pieces had burst. These facts led to the supposition that the enemy had evacuated the work, and it was determined to attempt its occupation. For this purpose two brigades, consisting of the Seventh Connecticut regiment, the Third New-Hampshire, the Ninth Maine, the Seventy-sixth Pennsylvania, and the Forty-eighth New-York, under Brig.-Gen. STRONG, and the Seventh New-Hampshire, Sixth Connecticut, Sixty-second Ohio, One Hundredth New-York and Fifty-fourth Massachusetts, colored, under Col. PUTNAM, who had been under arms all day, screened from the enemy behind a range of said hills, in the rear of our works, were ordered forward.

This was at dusk, and both brigades were formed in line on the beach, the regiments being disposed in columns, excepting the colored regiment which for some reason was given the post of extreme honor and of danger in the advance, and was drawn up in line of battle, exposing its full front to the enemy. This movement of the troops was observed by Sumter, and fire was at once opened upon them, happily without doing injury, as the shells went over the heads of the men.

Gen. STRONG'S brigade under this fire moved along the beach at slow time for about three-quarters of a mile, when the men were ordered to lie down. In this position they remained half an hour, Sumter meanwhile being joined in the cannonade by the rebels in Battery Bee, but without effect upon our troops. It was now quite dark, and the order was given for both brigades to advance, Gen. STRONG'S leading and Col. PUTNAM'S within supporting distance. The troops went forward at quick time and in deep silence, until the Fifty-fourth Massachusetts, led by its gallant Col. SHAW, was within two hundred yards of the work, when the men gave a fierce yell and rushed up the glacis, closely followed by the other regiments of the brigade.

The enemy, hitherto silent as the grave, while our men were swarming over the glacis, opened upon them furiously with grape, cannister, and a continuous fusilade of small arms.

The gallant negroes, however, plunged on regardless of this murderous reception, and many of them crossed the ditch, although it contained four feet of water, gaining the parapet. They were dislodged, however, in a few minutes with hand grenades, and retired helter skelter, leaving more than one-half of their number, including their brave colonel, dead upon the field.

The Sixth Connecticut Regiment, under Lieut.-Col. ROBMAN, was next in support of the Fifty-fourth, and they also suffered terribly, being compelled to retire after a stubborn contest. The Ninth Maine, which was next in line, was broken up by the passage of the remnant of the repulsed colored regiment through its lines, and retired in confusion, excepting three companies, which nobly stood their ground.

It now devolved upon the Third New-Hampshire regiment to push forward, and led by Gen. STRONG and Col. JACKSON in person the gallant fellows dashed up against the fort. Three companies actually gained the ditch, and wading through the water found shelter against the embankment. Here was the critical point of the assault, and the Second brigade, which should have been up and ready to support their comrades of the First, were unaccountably delayed. Gen. STRONG then gave the order to fall back, and lie down on the glacis, which was obeyed without confusion.

It was while waiting here, exposed to the heavy fire, that Gen. STRONG was wounded. A fragment of shell entered his thigh, passing entirely through the fleshy part and making a serious wound, although the bone escaped fracture. The breast of Col. JACKSON'S coat was torn off at the same time by a piece of shell, slightly wounding him. Neither of these brave men would lie down to escape the rain of metal, but stood unflinchingly throughout, eliciting the unbounded admiration of their men. Finding that the supports did not come, Gen. STRONG gave the order for his brigade to retire, and the men left the field in perfect order.

A little while afterwards the other brigades came up, and made up for their apparent tardiness by glorious deeds of valor. Rushing impetuously up the glacis, undeterred by the fury of the enemy, whose fire was not intermitted for a second, several of the regiments succeeded in crossing the ditch, scaling the parapet and descending into the fort. Here a hand-to-hand conflict ensued. Our men fought with desperation, and were able to drive the enemy from one side of the work to seek shelter between the traverses, while they held possession for something more than an hour. This unparalleled piece of gallantry was unfortunately of no advantage. The enemy rallied, and, having received large reinforcements, made a charge upon the band of heroes, and expelled them from their nobly-won position by the sheer force of numbers. One of the regiments engaged in this brilliant dash was the Forty-eighth New-York, Col. BARTON, and it came out almost decimated. The most distressing part of its disastrous treatment is, that the enemy did not inflict the damage. It was the result of a mistake on the part of one of our own regiments. The Forty-eighth was among the first to enter the fort, and was fired upon by a regiment that gained the parapet some minutes later, under the supposition that it was the enemy.

About midnight the order was given to retire, and our men fell back to the rifle-pits outside of our own works, having engaged in as hotly contested a battle as has ever been fought.

Our casualties, as may reasonably be expected, were very large. The list of killed, wounded and missing foots up fifteen hundred and thirty.

Among the killed are Col. PUTNAM, of the Seventh New-Hampshire; Col. SHAW, of the Fifty-fourth Massachusetts; Lieut.-Col. GREEN, of the Forty-eighth New-York; Adjutant LIBBY, of the Third New-Hampshire.

Gen. SEYMOUR was wounded in the foot, while directing movements in the field.

Col. BARTON, of the Forty-eighth New-York, was wounded in the thigh by a ball, which flattened against the bone.

Lieut.-Col. ROBMAN, of the Sixth Connecticut, was seriously wounded.

Lieut.-Col. BENDELL, of the Third New-Hampshire, was taken prisoner.

The day after the fight, the steamers Cosmopolitan and Mary Benton were dispatched to Hilton Head with the wounded, and every house in Beaufort is now occupied as a hospital.

Our dead were buried on Monday, at least that portion of them that were on the field within the limits that our burying party was allowed to approach the rebel works. Those who fell on the glacis and the ditch were interred by the enemy.

Individual instances of heroism during the contest were numerous. Among others it is mentioned that the color-bearer of the Fifty-fourth Massachusetts stood nobly up on the glacis with his flag, endeavoring to rally the men, and finding the task useless, he walked to the rear, still holding the flag aloft with remarkable deliberation, regardless altogether of the fearful fire.

The siege has not been suspended. Operations are still in progress, which Gen. GILLMORE is sanguine will result in success.

Among the passengers by the Arago are Brig.-Gen. TRUMAN SEYMOUR, who is stopping at the Astor House, Brig.-Gen. GEORGE C. STRONG, Col. JACKSON of the Third New-Hampshire, and Lieut.-Col. ROBMAN of the Sixth Connecticut.

The Arago Captures a Blockade Runner.

Early on the morning of the 24th the attention of Capt. GADSDEN was called to a black smoke some distance to the northward and eastward. He paid little regard to the matter, however, until an hour and a quarter later, when he observed that he was overhauling a steamer and that she left in her wake a number of bales of compressed cotton. Watching the craft more closely her movements were seen to be suspicious. She made and shortened sail, altered her course and acted otherwise in a strange way. By 7½ o'clock Capt. GADSDEN had passed as many as 100 bales of the cotton, and the hull of the steamer being now distinctly visible, he was satisfied that she was a blockade-runner. Although his vessel is only a transport, and is not armed for aggressive purposes, Capt. GADSDEN determined to give chase and capture this friend of John Secesh. The superior speed of the Arago in a few hours brought her up to the stranger, who obeyed the somewhat imperative summons to "heave to," which was given by a couple of whizzing rifle-shots from the Arago. The troops on board the transport were now all under arms to act as boarding party, if necessary, and a boat was sent to the stranger, with an armed crew, ordering the Captain to come on board.

He complied and the following conversation took place, Capt. GADSDEN being the interrogator:

Q.—What's the name of your vessel? A.—She has not got one.

Q.—What is your name? A.—DAVID LESLIE.

Q.—Where are you from? A.—Dixie.

Q.—Where's Dixie? A.—In the Southern States.

Q.—The Southern States are large—which part of the Southern States? A.—I decline to answer.

Q.—Where are you bound? A.—I don't know.

Q.—Who does know? A.—Nobody.

Q.—What did you throw cotton overboard for? A.—To lighten ship.

Q.—Why to lighten ship? A.—To get out of your way.

Q.—Where did you say you were from? A.—I did not say I was from anywhere.

Q.—Where are you bound? A.—Nowhere; but its no use talking any more, the ship is from Dixie and is your lawful prize.

Whereupon, after this frank acknowledgement, Capt. GADSDEN ordered a prize crew from his own ship to take the place of those on the captured vessel, which was taken in tow and brought hither.

The prize has a valuable cargo of cotton, rosin and turpentine. She is an iron vessel, known as the Emma, and is a famous blockade runner, having been very successful.

The capture was made in lat. 33 41 N. and long. 76 12 W. She was bound to Bermuda, and had two passengers—Messrs. A. HARRIS, of New-Orleans, and B. S. SANCHOS, of Georgia, on board.

BEAUREGARD'S OFFICIAL DISPATCHES.

CHARLESTON, Sunday, July 19.

After a furious bombardment of eleven hours, the enemy assaulted battery Wagner desperately and repeatedly. Our people fought desperately and repulsed the attack with great slaughter. Our loss was relatively light, but includes many valuable officers. Brig.-Gen. TALIAFERRO commanded on our side.

G. T. BEAUREGARD.

CHARLESTON, Wednesday, July 22.

The enemy commenced shelling again, yesterday, with but few casualties on our side. We had, in the battle of the 18th inst., about 150 killed and wounded. The loss of the enemy, including prisoners, was about 2,000. Nearly 800 were buried under a flag of truce.

Col. PUTNAM, Acting Brigadier-General, and Col. SHAW, commanding the negro regiment, were killed.

FROM GEN. MEADE'S ARMY.

A Week of Active and Successful Movements.

Unsuccessful Attempt of Lee to Pass Through the Gaps of the Blue Ridge.

His Forces Repulsed at Snicker's and Manassas Gaps.

A Large Number of Cattle, Sheep and Horses Recovered by Our Cavalry.

Lee Now Moving Toward Staunton.

A FIGHT WITH HIS REAR GUARD.

WASHINGTON, Sunday, July 26.

Advices from the headquarters of the Army of the Potomac, received to-night, say that, during the past week, our troops have not been idle, but, by a close scrutiny of LEE'S movements, have, by rapid marches, succeeded in baffling his several attempts to enter Eastern Virginia, and forestalled his attempted possession of the gaps of the Blue Ridge. It is generally believed he is now moving rapidly toward Staunton, by the Shenandoah Valley. He tried successively Snicker's, Ashby's and Manassas Gaps, but found a strong Union force already there. At the two last-named places he was driven back with loss.

At Chester Gap our cavalry recaptured 1,100 of the cattle stolen by the enemy, and several hundred sheep. A large number of horses have also been recovered.

Several brisk skirmishes have taken place. With the exception of cavalry engagements, the principal fight occurred Thursday evening, between Linden and Front Royal, in which a brigade of rebel infantry, probably LEE'S rear guard, were driven through the town. The cavalry have done excellent service.

The several commands have performed arduous marches and reconnoissances, and completely foiled STUART in all his attempts to raid on our flanks and rear. MOSBY'S small but energetic band have alone given us trouble, principally by cutting off foraging parties and messengers.

A private of cavalry reports that on Friday, as a division of cavalry was reconnoitering in the vicinity of Amissville, a large column of rebel infantry was seen advancing in that direction, and our cavalry were compelled to fall back. This force is supposed to be LONGSTREET'S corps. Up to Saturday night, however, this report had not been confirmed. It is impossible to conceive the poverty of the country through which the army passed. The scanty resources left untouched by the rebels have been appropriated by our own men, and nothing but starvation stares the sparce population in the future view. With the exception of Loudon County, there is nothing to harvest excepting a few acres of wheat and corn, and this must be done by manual labor, as the country has been entirely stripped of stock.

The railroad is now in running order to Warrenton. Our supplies, which have been nearly exhausted, are flowing into the army, and the mails, which have been entirely suspended since the army crossed the Potomac, are anxiously awaited. Though the army has had fatiguing marches, and consequent privations, it would be a mistake to suppose that it is to settle down in idleness.

The messenger who brought to Washington the above intelligence, reports that to-day forty of MOSBY'S guerrillas were captured near Fairfax Station.

BALTIMORE, Sunday, July 26.

The following dispatch has been received on Saturday evening at Headquarters of the Middle Department:

HEADQUARTERS ARMY OF THE POTOMAC,
FRONT ROYAL, Va., Saturday, July 25.

To Major-Gen. R. C. Schenck:

The Major-General Commanding directs me to acknowledge the receipt of your dispatch, and to inform you that he engaged the enemy at this point yesterday. This morning the enemy appears to have withdrawn, and his whole army is undoubtedly en route to Culpepper and Orange Court-house, and probably his rear has passed the Shenandoah at this place and Strasburgh.

By order,
(Signed,) A. A. MATTHEWS,
Colonel and Chief of Staff.

The following information was received at headquarters in this city to-day, by Major-Gen. SCHENCK. It is from Brig.-Gen. LOCKWOOD:

"The enemy has disappeared from our front entirely, and is nowhere north of Winchester. Our cavalry was in Charlestown yesterday, (Friday,) and scouts out to the distance of ten miles in every direction, without any signs of the enemy."

The following general order was issued by Gen. LOCKWOOD to-day:

It being understood that no enemy is in force near this command, all labor and military exercise will be suspended, save only in the usual inspections, parade, guard and picket. The day will be observed as a Christian Sabbath, and a service held in the several camps having chaplains.

Correspondence of the Philadelphia Press.

CAMP SIXTEENTH PENNSYLVANIA CAVALRY,
BOLIVAR HEIGHTS, Va., July 17, 1863.

On Wednesday, the 15th inst., the Third brigade, Second cavalry division, commanded by Col. J. IRWIN GREGG, left Bolivar Heights, taking the Winchester Pike. At Hall's Mills we turned to the right, on the road to Shepherdstown; the Sixteenth Pennsylvania in advance, commanded by Lieut.-Col. JOHN K. ROBISON, a reliable and excellent officer. The advance guard was composed of the squadrons of Capts. FISHER and SWAN, under Major W. H. FRY. After proceeding a couple of miles, we captured a mounted vedette of the enemy, and from that time until we reached Shepherdstown, kept up a continual skirmish with them, capturing seventeen, with their horses and equipments, with a loss to us of one killed and two wounded. At Shepherdstown Major FRY, with his command, charged through the streets, driving out over fifty of the enemy's cavalry, and scattering them in all directions, capturing eight prisoners, of whom one was a Major, (MORGAN, of the Sixth Virginia cavalry,) and two Lieutenants, two ambulances, and finding there over one hundred of the enemy's sick. The Sixteenth continued the advance through the town on the Martinsburgh Road to within six miles of that place, being engaged with and driving the enemy's skirmishers all the way. At this point we were so near the enemy's lines that we could hear distinctly their bands playing on our right and left. We obtained valuable information of their movements and location from parties who had left Martinsburgh that day. The object of the reconnoissance having been accomplished, we returned to within a mile of Shepherdstown, where we remained on picket. A little before dark our vedettes were driven in, but we speedily charged and repulsed the attack. The other regiments of the brigade had camped near Shepherdstown, with the roads around well picketed.

The next day, the 16th inst., as the First Maine regiment was going out on the Winchester road for forage, they met our pickets (from the Tenth New-York) running in, pursued by two squadrons of the enemy's cavalry. This truly noble little regiment instantly formed and charged the assailants, driving them back beyond the abandoned picket line. The enemy now appeared in force, bringing up their artillery rapidly, and opening fire on our line. The Maine held their ground, deploying skirmishers, and made a desperate fight. Our artillery was then advanced and posted in an advantageous position on the right and left of the road, supported by the Forty-seventh and Fifteenth Pennsylvania regiments. The Fourth was soon sent out to the right front, dismounted, and thrown forward as skirmishers. Shortly after the Sixteenth regiment was sent to relieve the First Maine, which had been engaged about two hours, and had expended all its ammunition. As we moved along the road they got to our range very fairly, sending their shells in very disagreeable proximity to us. The tall figure of Col. GREGG, as he and his aid, Lieut. MASSEY, and his escort rode along with us, attracted their attention, and wherever he moved thereafter, very leisurely over the field, their shell followed him, the fragments scattering all around; but he appeared to bear a charmed life and escaped unhurt. Three squadrons of the Sixteenth were dismounted and sent forward: FISHER'S and McDOWELL'S, under Major FRY, on the right, each officer dismounted, with carbine in hand; and the third, under Capts. SWAN and DAY, on the left: the fourth and last, under Capt. ALEXANDER, in reserve.

The country in which we were fighting is fitly fitted for cavalry movements—the ground very rocky and broken, cut up into small fields, with high stone and rail fence, and frequent small patches of timber. This will account for the strange event of a fight between cavalrymen, where all the fighting was on foot, aided by artillery. Our artillery consisted of four pieces. Soon after the Sixteenth was thrown forward; two of these were sent to secure an important position on our left, and were not brought into play during the fight; so we fought with two pieces of artillery, and these not as effective as they should have been, on account of bad ammunition; two of the shells, which should have gone over our heads into the enemy's line, striking the ground between our reserve and the dismounted men. The rebels had eight guns in position firing at one time, and far better served than usual for them, in the cavalry fights I have noticed, whether Kelly's Ford, Aldie, Middleburgh or Upperville. At times their firing was terrific to be concentrated on so small a line as ours; their shot, shell, grape and canister coming all around and among us, lopping the branches from the trees, and splintering huge fragments from the rocks they came in contact with. Nothing but the uneven character of the ground preserved our little brigade from annihilation.

The Sixteenth took up the fighting for the Maine, which retired; but seeing us pushed at one time they came out gallantly, without being asked, and we made "Johnny" travel. As our men's passions became excited in the contest, having repulsed an attack on the right, they forgot the order of Col. GREGG "to hold the line, but not to advance," and with a cheer sprang forward after the foe, driving them to their guns, where they, having a fair sweep, open all their pieces on us at once, with grape and canister. We were driven back. They charged us with exulting shouts, while their artillery hurled shell without cessation. We were driven back a quarter of a mile from our old line—all we were driven that day. In this charge the noble Capt. FISHER was mortally wounded—one ball passing through his thigh, another through his breast. Col. GREGG looked anxious and appeared irritated that his order was not obeyed. On the left, Capt. SWAN had advanced in imitation of the right, and had fared the same fate, having his horse shot from under him and losing some of his best men. A new line is soon formed, strengthened by ALEXANDER'S squadron, a couple of squadrons of the First Pennsylvania regiment, from McINTOSH'S brigade, having come up to support us. The fight goes on as wickedly as ever. The rebel battle-flag is shot down three times in a few minutes, and the last color-bearer compelled to crouch behind a wall and hold up the flag from his lurking-place. As night came on the enemy made several desperate attempts, all of which were steadily repulsed; after the last, our men, mounting the stone wall behind which the last line was formed, cheering and waving their hats, and challenging their opponents to come on, although their ammunition was exhausted.

Night put an end to the contest. At about 9 o'clock the First Maine and First and Fourth Pennsylvania were ordered to fall back, leaving the Sixteenth to hold the battle-field. At about midnight Assistant Adj.-Gen. MAITLAND came and announced to Lieut.-Col. ROBISON that our wounded and all the other regiments had left, and that we were to bring up the rear, but to remain until two o'clock. At that hour we noiselessly marched through the fields for a couple of miles, until we struck the road to Harper's Ferry, when we soon rejoined the brigade, and by five A. M. formed squadron on Bolivar Heights.

Thus ended one of the most desperate cavalry fights of the war, considering the number actually engaged; our brigade not numbering over eight hundred men, having become reduced by detachments sent to different points, and men left in the rear dismounted, their animals having become used up by the hard work of the past two months. At different times our fire ceased entirely, from want of ammunition. A remarkable circumstance is, that, to our knowledge, not one prisoner was taken on either side, except those of ours so badly wounded that they could not move, and were left behind when we were driven back. Gen. GREGG accompanied us to Shepherdstown, and McINTOSH'S brigade was posted on our left, toward Harper's Ferry, but with the exception of that portion of the First Pennsylvania referred to, did not participate. Capt. FISHER, to whom I have referred, is well known to Philadelphia merchants as an old merchant of Uniontown, Penn. A gallant soldier, a gentleman, and a pleasant companion, his loss will be deeply regretted.

VICTORY BY GENERAL BLUNT.

Severe Fight South of Fort Gibson.

Five Thousand Rebels, under General Cooper, Defeated by 2,400 National Troops.

Special Dispatch to the New-York Times.

LEAVENWORTH, Saturday, July 25.

On Thursday, the 16th, a severe fight occurred between Gen. BLUNT and the rebel Gen. COOPER, at Elk Creek, fifty miles south of Fort Gibson, which resulted in a complete Union victory. Gen. BLUNT had twenty-four hundred men and twelve guns; COOPER five thousand, on his own ground.

We marched fifty miles in twenty-four hours, and immediately attacked. Two rebel guns were dismounted and captured, and the enemy finally fled with a loss of sixty killed, twenty-four wounded and a hundred prisoners. Our loss was ten killed and thirty wounded.

Col. WILLIAMS, of the First Kansas colored regiment, was severely wounded in the head and shoulders.

We captured ten thousand pounds of flour and salt, with other quartermaster and commissary stores.

Our cavalry were pursuing when the dispatch left.

OFFICIAL REPORT OF GEN. SCHOFIELD.

ST. LOUIS, July 25, 1863.

To Major-Gen. H. W. Halleck, General-in-Chief, Washington:

On the 17th inst. Gen BLUNT attacked COOPER, twenty-five miles south of Fort Gibson, and routed him, capturing one gun and many prisoners. The enemy left sixty killed and thirty-six wounded on the field. Our loss was ten killed and twenty-four wounded. COOPER retreated toward Fort Smith.

J. M. SCHOFIELD, Major-General.

The Firing Recently Heard off Portland.

BOSTON, Sunday, July 26.

The firing heard off Portland on Friday was from the United States steamer Montgomery, trying her guns. She fired thirty rounds. She spoke no vessels. There was foggy weather all the while.

MORGAN CAPTURED.

Himself and All His Command Prisoners.

Official Dispatch from Gen. Shackleford.

A Previous Engagement and Rout of the Rebels Yesterday Morning.

CINCINNATI, Sunday, July 26.

The following has been received at headquarters:

HEADQUARTERS IN THE FIELD,
THREE MILES SOUTH OF NEW-LISBON, O., July 26.

To Col. Lewis Richmond, A. A. G.:

By the blessing of Almighty God, I have succeeded in capturing Gen. JOHN H. MORGAN, Col. CLERKE, and the balance of the command, amounting to about 400 prisoners. I will start with MORGAN and Staff on the first train for Cincinnati, and await the General's order for transportation for the balance.

(Signed,) J. M. SHACKLEFORD,
Colonel Commanding.

CLEVELAND, Ohio, Sunday, July 26.

Maj. WAY, with 250 of the Ninth Michigan cavalry, forced MORGAN to an engagement at 3 o'clock this morning, a mile from Salineville, Ohio, and routed him, capturing 240 prisoners. MORGAN, with 300, escaped, but they were all captured by SHACKLEFORD at 3 P. M. Sunday, near New-Lisbon. MORGAN and his Staff are now prisoners at Wellsville, Ohio.

LOUISVILLE, Sunday, July 26.

Well authenticated reports announce the capture of Gen. JOHN H. MORGAN, with the residue of his command, in the vicinity of Steubenville, Ohio. The particulars are not stated.

MORGAN'S MOVEMENTS ON FRIDAY.

Dispatch to the Cincinnati Gazette.

COLUMBUS, Friday, July 24.

MORGAN'S movements to-day have been somewhat rapid, considering the difficulties to overcome. Last evening, on leaving Cumberland, his force was probably divided into two divisions, one of which, the largest, was under command of MORGAN himself. They left Cumberland last evening, about 8 o'clock, and taking a northeastern direction, succeeded in striking the Central Ohio Railroad at Campbell Station at 7 o'clock this morning. He there burned the bridge and depot. He resumed his march in a northern direction, and arrived at Washington, on the National road, about 10 this forenoon. He destroyed several small bridges, and stole a number of horses on his way. At this place, our forces succeeded in approaching him close enough for a severe skirmish, which resulted in the killing of several rebels. Six were captured. Leaving Washington soon after 11, without being able to do much damage, he followed an eastern direction on the National road as far as Fairview, which is on the border line of the counties of Belmont and Guernsey, and is about eight miles east of Washington. He there left the National road and moved in a northeast course for some distance, when it was changed for a southeastern one until he again reached the National road at 4 this P. M. at Hendrysburgh, some six miles east of Fairview. We have no advices of his movements after this, other than his course would indicate that he was striving to reach Barnesville, where he can have another chance to damage the Central Ohio Road. He has probably already passed through that town, but we cannot say positively.

We have received advices of the operations of the other squads. After leaving Cumberland the direction was directly east, which, if continued, would bring them to the Ohio river at a point called Sunfish, twenty miles from Wheeling. It may be that both detachments will meet at that place, and then cross the river in force, if not prevented by our men, who are reported to be on their heels all day, but have not succeeded in doing them much damage.

A Large Detachment of his Force Enters Cincinnati.

The Cincinnati Times describes as follows the appearance of the detachment of MORGAN'S column which entered that city on Thursday, having been taken thither on the steamers Ingomar and Starlight.

About 10 o'clock, under direction of Capt. EDGAR, the officers among the prisoners—some seventy-six in number—were put on board one of the Covington ferryboats, and landed after some delay, at the foot of Walnut-street—meanwhile a vast concourse had assembled. There were three wounded officers on board, among whom was Col. HOFFMAN, shot in the hip, and who could with difficulty walk. They were placed in a carriage, and with the other prisoners—all officers—in the rear, the procession—the Thirteenth Virginia forming the guard—moved up Vine-street, Capt. DAY at its head.

It was followed by thousands on the sidewalks and in the streets, each anxious to have a good look at the raiders, many of whom were pointed out by those who had known them heretofore, and in this manner we became acquainted with BASIL DUKE, Col. SMITH, DICK MORGAN and others. DUKE appeared to be the best known to those who accompanied the procession, and every once in a while he would raise his white sombrero to some one whom he would recognize. He is of medium size, spare, thin features, with a piercing eye, brown hair, mustache and goatee, not more than twenty-six years of age.

He has appropriately been called the head and brains of JOHN MORGAN—is from Georgetown, Scott County, Ky., a few miles north of Lexington. He entered Yale College in 1841, and graduated in 1845. He is represented to have been a man of parts and of large heart. From the triennial catalogues and the one of 1841, we see he was the classmate of the following officers: H. B. CARRINGTON, then of Connecticut, now Colonel of the Eighteenth United States infantry and Brigadier-General of Volunteers; Capt. H. HARRINGTON, of Vermont, (A. C. S.,) U. S. A.; also, in the rebel army are Brig.-Gen. TAYLOR, (son of ZACHARY TAYLOR, and the wealthiest planter in Louisiana;) Brig. Gen. WM. CONNOR and Col. LEMUEL CONNOR, of Mississippi; Brig.-Gen. H. BRECKEL and Gen. SHORTER, of Alabama; Col. DIXON, of South Carolina; and Major WILLIAM T. COSTA, killed near Maysville, Ky., in 1861.

During the raid into Kentucky last New-Year's, he was wounded in a skirmish with the Seventh Kentucky cavalry, near Springfield, in Washington County, but was taken into a carriage by his friends, by which means he escaped being captured.

DICK MORGAN, brother to the still fleeing JOHN, wore a star on his black sombrero, turned up on one side; is of medium size, well built, dark hair, smooth face, and really rather prepossessing. No one, we believe, ever gave him credit for possessing any very great amount of brains, although he ranks as Colonel in the rebel army. He is probably about thirty years of age. Col. SMITH, who walked with DUKE, immediately behind the carriage containing the prisoners, is a large, fine-looking man, of commanding person, and full flowing light beard; we should judge not more than thirty to thirty-five years of age.

During the march to the City Prison, the prisoners conversed freely with one another. The crowd which followed behaved themselves decently, but once or twice on the line of march giving groans for the captured raiders, though we frequently heard such remarks as the following:

"Where are all your fine horses, now?"

"You look well now, don't you? Horse-thieves and murderers," etc., etc. But few of the prisoners had anything upon their persons to denote their rank, being principally clad in grey clothing, or that which is denominated butternut. There was not a man of them over forty-five, at least, we should so judge from their appearance.

A number of them carried the old-fashioned saddle-bags, and might have been mistaken for clergymen, if they had been a little more devout looking. A majority were light complexioned, with light beard. They gazed about them with considerable effrontery, and no one would have taken them for prisoners—some among them were mere beardless boys, and were inclined to put on airs and swagger as they passed through the streets.

When arrived at the City Prison, the wounded men were placed in the office, and the remainder were marched up stairs to the room formerly occupied by the female prisoners. At the entrance to the stairway there was a sign of "No Admittance," which several of the prisoners noticed, and jocosely drew back, saying there was certainly some mistake—they were not allowed in there. Another exclaimed: "Well, I'll be d—d, but this is the first time I was ever in prison before." He probably ought to have been in such an institution long since.

As to what will eventually be done with the prisoners we have no knowledge. The privates, we understand, will be taken to Indianapolis this evening, under an escort of the One Hundred and Eleventh Ohio, Col. JOHN E. BOND.

It is understood that a man named JAMES CANNON, well known to our citizens, a drayman, and formerly in the service of the United States, was captured among the rebels and has been sent to Camp Chase. We have a number of other particulars for which we have not time or space to-day.

THE RAID IN NORTH CAROLINA.

OFFICIAL REPORT OF GEN. FOSTER

The Story not Half Told by the Rebels

Immense Destruction of Public Property.

An Iron-Clad and Two Steamboats Destroyed at Tarboro.

WASHINGTON, Sunday, July 26.

The following official report has been received at the headquarters of the army:

NEWBERN, N. C., July 24, via FORTRESS MONROE.

To Maj.-Gen. H. W. Halleck, General-in-Chief U. S. A.:

GENERAL: I have the honor to report that the cavalry raid having for its object the destruction of the railroad bridge at Rocky Mount, has returned, completely successful. The expedition consisted of the Third regiment New-York cavalry and a squadron of the Twelfth and of MIX'S men, (cavalry,) and one company of North Carolina, and was under the command of Brig.-Gen. EDWARD E. POTTER, Chief of Staff. The bridge over the Tar River at Rocky Mount, a station on the Wilmington and Weldon Railroad between Goldsboro and Weldon, was completely destroyed. The bridge was three hundred and fifty feet long, and the trestle-work four hundred feet more. A cotton mill, filled, a flouring mill containing 1,000 barrels of flour and large quantities of hard bread; a machine-shop containing shells, gunpowder and every munition of war; a large depot, offices, &c.; an engine and a train of cars; a wagon train of twenty-five wagons, filled with stores and munitions; an armory and machine-shop, with the machinery and materials, and eight hundred bales of cotton, were all destroyed.

At Tarboro two steamboats, and one large and fine iron-clads in process of construction, a saw-mill, a train of cars, one hundred bales of cotton, and large quantities of subsistance and ordnance stores were destroyed. About 100 prisoners were taken, and some 300 animals—horses and mules. Some 300 contrabands followed the expedition into Newbern.

The force had constant fighting with the enemy, who made great endeavors to intercept their return, but in every case the enemy's position was either turned, or they were compelled to retire. Our loss in killed, wounded and missing will not exceed twenty-five men.

I have the honor to be, very respectfully,
Your obedient servant,
J. G. FOSTER, Major-Gen. Com.

REPORTS FROM NEWBERN.

NEWBERN, Sunday, July 23.

The cavalry expedition, consisting of a detachment of the Third and Twelfth New-York cavalry and the North Carolina Union cavalry, which left here on the morning of the 18th inst., under command of Brig.-Gen. POTTER, returned yesterday, having been entirely successful, traveling 200 miles. The expedition went through Greenville and Tarboro, which places were taken without any loss on our side, and after destroying the rebel commissary depots in these places, the cavalry pushed on to Rocky Mount, on the Wilmington and Weldon Railroad, where they captured a train of cars loaded with ordnance stores, all of which were destroyed. Several rebel officers and soldier on the train were also captured. The extensive railroad bridge at that point was burnt with a rebel commissary depot and a cotton factory. A train of some two thousand contrabands, which our cavalry had picked up, having taken the wrong road, fell into the enemy's hands with Lieut. H. A. MOSHER, Lieut. H. A. HUBBARD, and fifteen privates of Company A, Twelfth New-York cavalry, which constitutes our loss. About one hundred and fifty rebel officers and men were brought in, with many horses, mules and negroes. Several skirmishes took place, in which the enemy were every time repulsed. Much credit is due Gen. POTTER, and all who accompanied him on this perilous mission, for the efficiency and bravery displayed.

A Rebel View of "Yankee Raids."

From the Richmond Whig, July 23.

Fair warning was given by the Yankees of their intention to organize 100,000 mounted men, and ravage the country far and wide. Southern newspapers did all in their power to awaken the people to a sense of danger, to keep them from trusting to the aid of the Government, which already had its hands more than full, and to inculcate the lesson of self-reliance. These efforts of the Press were rewarded with but little success, owing, it is to be feared, to the inveterate indolence of the Southern people.

In a few places companies for local defence were formed, but no system of rallying these companies to a threatened point was adopted.

No attention was paid to the suggestion of the papers that, as far as possible, the home guards should be mounted, and prepared, at a given signal, to repair swiftly to strategic positions, previously selected, to oppose the advance of the raiders, and to cut off their retreat, by blocking up the roads and destroying the bridges. The people seemed to think the formation of a few companies of militia in towns and villages far apart, without any concert of action, or any means of combining quickly, was all that could reasonably be expected of them.

The consequences of this slip-shod Southern way of doing things are before us in the raid on Knoxville and the destruction of the bridge at Strawberry Plains, the raid on Richmond and the burning of the bridge on the South Anna, the raid on the Virginia and Tennessee Road at Wytheville, and lastly the raid on the Wilmington and Weldon Road, the destruction of a bridge 200 feet long, the loss of 5,000 bales of cotton and two car-loads of ammunition, the burning of an important cotton factory and other losses. The property destroyed is of small importance compared to the impunity with which in every instance, except perhaps that at Wytheville, the raiders have escaped. During the excitement in this city caused by STRAIN'S exploits, it was bitterly said that a Yankee raid on Richmond was as pleasant and easy as a fox-chase. It is certain that the other raids have been equally agreeable and safe. The pastime afforded the Yankees by our unprepared condition, at points where preparation ought by all means to have been made, is the best possible encouragement for them to assail all other places. If a thousand Yankee horsemen can sport leisurely around the Confederate Capital, we may be sure that five hundred will not be deterred from enjoying themselves in every interior county of the Southern States.

Unless we begin instantly to organize mounted men for home defence, and to adopt a system of signals by which they can be rallied at a moment's warning, we may rest assured that the late raids are but a foretaste of a feast of rapine which is soon to come in all parts of the land. Letter writers tell us that the Dutch farmers in Pennsylvania did an excellent bushwhacking business upon our forces, thereby saving a great deal of their property and helping not a little to expel us from their soil. It is true that we are not wedded to property as Dutch Yankees are, and will not fight as hard to protect it, but for very shame and for the sake of Southern manhood, we might try to show at least as much spirit as the Pennsylvanians.

NEW PUBLICATIONS.

JOURNAL OF A RESIDENCE ON A GEORGIAN PLANTATION IN 1838-1839. By FRANCES ANNE KEMBLE. 12mo. New-York: HARPER & BROTHERS.

This indignant protest of a woman, highly gifted, energetic, impulsive, against a system, in the midst of which she was suddenly thrown, is destined to be very widely read. Though unquestionably what it professes to be, a Journal, written from day to day—the outpouring of a full heart under overwrought feelings to the ear of a distant friend—it conveys a higher idea of Mrs. KEMBLE's talents as a writer, than her more finished and ornate productions. Verse is often very "blank" indeed when compared with the burning words extorted by an ever-present sense of cruel injury and irremediable wrong. It can scarcely be said that the Journal throws much absolutely new light on the relations of Southern Slavery to the parties who suffer from its contact. Common repute, and hundreds of sensation stories, have made us familiar with the foul and loathsome incidents necessarily involved in the existence of hereditary servitude. Its chief value is the directness of the testimony it affords on the subject. Neither particulars of time, place or person are wanting to its details, and the effect of one story of suffering thus individualized and localized, is greater than that of a host of vague and flying rumors, or the most elaborate pictures of the novelist. No room exists for doubting the purpose of the publication. There is something solemn in evoking for the destruction of the system which sanctioned them, these memories of buried and forgotten oppression, whose cry has long been silent on earth, whatever record it may elsewhere bear. The authoress informs us that the slaves among whom her experience was unwillingly gained, have long since been sold and dispersed; the islands where the scene of the journal is laid are now in the occupation of the United States troops, and she would fain hope that the condition of things it describes has vanished, never to be renewed. The tints of the work are, however, not entirely sombre. The brilliancy of nature's coloring in Southern scenery, its unspeakable rural solitudes, its wildernesses of uncultivated and ungathered flowers, the softened blending of air, earth and sky in the golden haze of its sunsets, all impressed themselves vividly on the northern lady who saw them for the first time, and they are faithfully mirrored, while the freshness of early feelings was retained, in the pages of the Journal. The instances of gratitude shown by the slaves for the unaccustomed succor and sympathy of a kind and Christian mistress who flings her brave heart into the work, are often unspeakably touching. Even the system of slavery itself can be shorn of much of its horrors by the alleviation of personal influences. Those "happy accidents," amiable despots, occur sometimes in the plantation as on a throne. Mr. BUTLER'S slaves had suffered from the long-continued absenteeism of their owners, but other neighboring properties had been more conscientiously administered by the proprietors, and showed better results.

For a time Mrs. KEMBLE (whose idea of Heaven, according to a friend, consisted "in plenty of hard work") found ample exercise for her robust and healthy temperament, both physical and mental, in exertions for improving the condition, as well temporal as spiritual, of the slaves she had by marriage acquired an interest in. She scorned to succumb to the languors of a Southern sky, like most of her sex that she saw around. More powerful than this was the growing conviction of the utter impotence of her labors for the production of any permanent good, that at last induced her to abandon them, and return to the North. Mrs. KEMBLE would be untrue to her nature if she wrote otherwise than as a partisan, and critics have objected to the entire unreserve of the personal details of the journal. All the qualities, however, that might unfit her for the authorship of a philosophic essay on Slavery and its consequences, only add to the force and vivacity of her book. Making proper allowance for what astronomers call "personal equation," as a corrective of the visual errors which prevent exact identity of observation between any two individuals—the unconscious tinge or bias derived from attention long strained on one object, and that not a pleasing one—we must regard the book as destined to exert great influence at home and abroad, in a manner most accordant with the desires of the writer, when she decided on its publication.

CHRISTOPHER NORTH—A Memoir of JOHN WILSON, late Professor of Moral Philosophy in the University of Edinburg, compiled from Family Papers and other sources by his daughter, Mrs. GORDON; with a Introduction by R. SHELTON MACKENZIE, D. C. L. 12mo New-York. W. J. WIDDLETON.

Mrs. GORDON'S memorial of her father is well and worthily done. It was fitting that a man of WILSON'S eminence in literature should not pass away unrecorded, but so domestic were his habits, so little known was the actual man beyond the charmed circle of his home, that by no one not an inmate of it could the task be satisfactorily executed. Relatives are generally untrustworthy biographers, from obvious and natural causes; but, in this instance, womanly good taste has seconded filial affection in the production of a picture at once "tender and true," not only of the man, but also, in a great measure, of the literary society of which he was the acknowledged chief. Prof. WILSON'S genius has reacted against himself in a singular manner. He is a literary Frankenstein, obscured and superseded by his own creation. No one ever mistook RICHARDSON for "Sir Charles Grandison," or confounded STERNE with "My Uncle Toby," but Prof. WILSON'S ideal conceptions are fully worked by repeated touches, "Christopher North," he of the crutch, "the old man eloquent," editor of Blackwood's Magazine, is a tangible reality, which the real professor can hardly displace, to thousands of readers, like poor Miss BRONTE, who, while yet a child at the Yorkshire parsonage, jots down in her note-book: "We read Blackwood's Magazine, the most able periodical there is. The editor is Mr. Christopher North, an old man 74 years of age. The 1st of April is his birthday."

To most people, therefore, Mrs. GORDON'S memoir will be a revelation of a character in many respects more peculiar and unique than that of any public man was the noble physique—the leonine presence—the towering stature, and the familiarity with all manly exercises, that would have marked him as a leader among his fellows, even in the rudest stage of society. That these qualities should co-exist with an ideality the most refined and sensitive, an inexhaustible wealth of poetical imagination, and a living and practical sense of moral and religious obligation, was to many who regard a poet as necessarily a delicate and dreamy thing, a phenomenon perfectly incomprehensible. The death of his father, while JOHN WILSON was in early life, placed him as he grew up in possession of an unincumbered fortune of $250,000. In spite of all the temptations which such a position exposed him to, we trace him in Mrs. GORDON'S Memoir fulfilling a University career, the brilliancy of which, for many years gave his name a prestige worthy of long remembrance in the "Academic Halls of Oxford," and then settling down to the enjoyment of domestic life, in the quiet seclusion of a charming country retreat, with the prospect of a long life of lettered ease and enjoyment. Four years after his marriage, when by the treachery of a relative, his entire fortune was embezzled, and the loss awoke him to sterner realities, he proved equal to the occasion. Thirty years of a laborious professorial career, and a mass of literary work almost unequaled in amount and rapidity of execution, the love of a numerous family, the respect and affection of his classes, attest how nobly WILSON acquitted himself under all the relations of life. His personal character seems to be without a shade, and whoever knew him dwells with delight on the joyous geniality of his manner, the boyish bursts of enthusiasm for his favorite sports, the large heart, full of kindliness and affection for his domestic animal pets, his children, his pupils and his friends. His literary life, which flowed on with an even current of steady work, is equally characteristic. His Tales and Poems have a fixed station in English belles lettres, that would satisfy the ambition of most writers, and they will always afford delight. His lectures slumber in MS., whence no one is anxious to disinter them; but in his own peculiar line few will deny to JOHN WILSON the rank of the first magazine-writer in the world. The coincidence of political sentiments that brought him in contact with Mr. BLACKWOOD, when the magazine established by that gentleman was starting on its career, determined his whole future. He joined it with an ardor like that of a man who accepts his destiny, and his whole powers were henceforth employed in forwarding its interests. At first connected with a clique of Edinburgh cockneys, bent on writing themselves up at any expense of good morals and manners, of whom LOCKHART was the chief, WILSON for a time allowed himself to be involved in the dirty work of partisanship, but it is interesting to observe how by degrees these evil influences were shaken off, and he shines out unclouded as the brilliant critic, the half-inspired utterer of poetic prose, yearning with sympathy for all things whatsoever that are pure, lovely and of good repute in art, nature and the mind of man. WILSON was compounded of feelings and prepossessions that can never be repeated. He and SCOTT fought the battle of declining Scotch nationality with seeming success, though subsequent events have nearly destroyed it. How truly national he was may be gathered from the fact, that after his marriage he only paid two short visits to London. His whole allegiance was given to the northern city that he fondly wished to maintain independent of the great capital of the Empire. Things have changed since then. Except in sectarian violence, the literary circles of Edinburgh are dumb. The Review has long been owned, edited and printed in London, and though Blackwood is still manufactured in Scotland, all distinctive nationality is lost, and its best writers (BULWER, WARREN, &c.,) are Englishmen. The Scottish capital cannot support a single literary organ, and the inevitable law of centralization is fast rendering it a suburb of London. Forgetting the old adage that comparisons are odious, Dr. SHELTON MACKENZIE, in his rather superfluous introduction, informs us in ex cathedra style that Mrs. GORDON'S work "ranks with the five best literary biographies in our language." Disclaiming such critical exactness, we are sure the public voice will accord it, for charm of subject and execution, a place among the most honored tributes paid by affection to departed worth.

LOST AND SAVED—By the Hon. Mrs. NORTON, author of "Stuarts of Dunleath." Illus. Philadelphia: J. B. LIPPINCOTT & Co.

Mrs. NORTON'S new book has every requisite of a good novel. Though written with a purpose, it is not obtruded on the reader, but left to be worked out by the progress of the story. A Heroine created as a model of charm and perfection in woman—a stirring plot, spiced with a little of the fashionable sensationalism and a happy final dénouement, characters well contrasted and discriminated, often touched with a lively humor, showing, in spite of adverse circumstances, Mrs. NORTON'S participation in the genial Sheridan blood, all combine to render Lost and Saved one of the successes of the season, and entitled to claim a place in the future collections of "Standard Novels." As GODWIN wrote Caleb Williams to exemplify the amount of persecution and oppression in modern communities that could be inflicted within the pale of the law, Mrs. NORTON'S object is to show the injuries that may be committed against woman in her dearest relations, without calling forth from society any expression of the scorn and opprobrium that should be the doom of the perpetrator. The callousness of public opinion to individual injuries she considers increases when the victim is a woman, and the conviction of the unpunished wrong now rampant in high places in England, has moved her pen to expose the pharisaism of the practice that cherishes the offender while in principle it pretends to repudiate the offence. The heroine is led into a marriage in a foreign country, real indeed, but secret, the authenticity of which is denied by the would-be seducer, when he tires of his victim. The deepest distress gathers round Beatrice when deserted and exposed to the world's contumely, she labors to gain her daily bread; but, brighter days arrive, her faith and truth are at last vindicated, and the guilty are punished through the consequences of their own pleasant vices. Mrs. NORTON has replied to the criticism which has objected to her book, not by denying that such things were, but by pleading that it was wrong to expose them to the world by making them the groundwork of a modern novel, with crushing effect, reiterating her sense of the magnitude of the evil, and the necessity of awakening an acuter sense of it in the public mind, before any remedy can be looked for.

DRIFTING ABOUT; Or, WHAT JESSE PIPER, OF PIPERVILLE, SAW AND DID. An Autobiography by STEPHEN C. MASSETT. With Comic Illustrations by MULLIN. New-York: CARLETON, No. 413 BROADWAY.

Mr. MASSETT is a modern Troubadour who—perfectly at home in any latitude, armed with his natural gifts of music and song, has led a wandering life about the world—sure of a kind reception wherever a concord of sweet sounds finds admirers, from his voyage from his native London, in 1837, to the date when he addresses his readers. It is difficult to say where he has not been, and what profession he has not at some time or the other assumed; clerk, surveyor, auctioneer, Commissioner of Deeds and Notary Public and (always when other trades fail) Wandering Minstrel. He has seen a larger portion of the earth's surface than would have established a man as a traveled "lion" a few years ago, before steam had annihilated distance, and brought the ends of the earth together. Unlike his prototype, the Troubadour of old, who confined his professional ministrations to the occupants of "Lady's Bower and Knightly Hall," Mr. MASSETT has found patronage as sympathetic and remunerative from the miners of California, the lumbermen of British Columbia, and the stockmen and gold-diggers of Australia, as from the dilettanti concert-goers of Bombay, Calcutta, Boston or New-York. He does not indulge in the ordinary traveler's privilege of drawing on the credulity of his readers; enough to be the hero of his own story his chequered career is modestly narrated, even when in the first flush of success in California, (the land of his adoption) the scenes he witnessed were enough to throw the most staid and self-possessed man off his usual balance. The present little volume hardly does justice to Mr. MASSETT'S talent for observation of men and things. A fearful scene in the Hindoo mutiny is described so as to show he is capable of higher achievements. When his locomotive faculties need repose, and he tires of "putting a girdle round the earth," and can forget the necessity of being funny, we hope he will employ his leisure in recording experiences more varied than DARIO could imagine for one of his roving heroes.

—BARON LIEBIG, the great chemist, has chosen a singular subject for examination. He has commenced a review of Lord BACON'S Works on Physical Science, with the express object of proving that the great Chancellor was a charlatan in science, whose reputation is altogether undeserved and baseless. Macmillan's Magazine is the medium in which his papers on the subject appear.

—Shakespearian Literature continues to flourish. Mr. HALLIWELL has just issued the Eleventh Folio Volume of his colossal Edition of the Works, and announces that the four yet to be issued are in a state of forwardness. Of this edition, limited strictly to one hundred and fifty copies, the list of subscribers shows that fourteen find their way to the United States. Mr. HALLIWELL also mentions that since his edition was commenced, new materials of an unexpected and important nature, relating to the biography of Shakespeare, have been discovered, which has induced him to project some supplementary volumes, printed uniformly, and if he succeeds in carrying out the idea, the material for the life of the Poet will be accumulated on a scale not yet anticipated. A volume devoted to the History of New Place, Stratford, alone, is nearly ready for the press. At the same time the beautifully printed Cambridge edition of Shakespeare, under the editorship of Messrs. CLARK & GLOVER, of Trinity College, is progressing favorably, the first volume being received with much favor. It aims especially to exhibit a correct text of the author, deduced from the first edition downward, and gives the authority for each emendation or new reading, credited to its proper source. Mr. DYCE also announces a new issue of his Library Edition, in six volumes, with important revisions. A reproduction of the First Folio of 1623, by the new art of Photozincography, is announced. Among the contributions to Shakespearian Literature, the new volume of LOWNDES Bibliographers' Manual, published by Mr. H. G. BOHN, must not be forgotten. The article "Shakespeare" comprises, in one hundred and twenty closely printed pages, the fullest list, with ample Bibliographical notes of editions, illustrations, commentaries, translations in all languages, and "Shakesperiana" generally, that has ever been recorded.

—Madame VINOUY, whose contributions to literature have already made her well known, is preparing a volume of literary miscellanies, which will be published during the coming season

THE ARMY OF THE CUMBERLAND.

Col. Wilder's Account of its Operations.

From the Indianapolis Journal, July 23.

Col. WILDER, whose brigade of mounted infantry in ROSECRANS' army has been frequently noticed recently for its daring exploits and ceaseless activity, was in our city yesterday on a brief visit home to adjust some private business. He left Nashville on Tuesday, and Tullahoma on Monday morning, bringing news from the advance of the Army of the Cumberland to the 20th inst. He informs us that the latest and safest news from BRAGG'S army is that it is concentrated at Chattanooga, with its supplies at Atlanta. Only rations for a week are kept at Chattanooga, so that if compelled to retreat no great amount of stores need be abandoned. One brigade is at Bridgeport. BRAGG evidently intends to make the Tennessee River his base of operations. The desertions from his army, the Colonel says, are far more numerous than has been represented, and are mainly Tennessee, Kentucky and North Alabama men. The Tennesseeans will not leave the State any more, and they, with other deserters, are forming guerrilla bands to resist any force sent to compel them into either army. This movement concerns us but little, as our Government does not propose to force rebel deserters into our ranks, but it does prove a very serious annoyance to the rebels, if the war lasts long enough to give them a chance to feel it. On one occasion a deserter came into Col. WILDER'S lines, and inquired what would be done with him if he took the oath of allegiance. On being assured that he would be allowed to go home and stay there, he went out and returned with 40 more, who had been waiting to learn their fate before they ventured too far, and these 47 each were all from one company of 51, the desertions just about annihilating it. The Colonel mentioned the name of the Captain and the regiment of this "cleaned out" company, but we have forgotten it. Fully 7,000 Tennesseeans have left the rebel army, and, with the Kentuckians and Alabamians, at least 10,000 have deserted since the retreat from Tullahoma. The country is full of them. BRAGG'S force, the Colonel thinks, cannot exceed 40,000 men, if it is even that strong. ROSECRANS' army is much stronger—how much it would go no good to tell. After the tremendous rains and freshets which preceded and accompanied WILDER'S last expedition, and plucked his way completely, there is little doubt that BRAGG would have had his retreat cut off, and been compelled to fight, with the certainty of being terribly defeated, if not destroyed.

Since the last of last February, Col. WILDER has been twenty-eight times through the rebel lines, and taken 1,167 prisoners, about 4,000 horses, and a small army of slaves. In the last expedition he took about 600 prisoners, 900 horses, and 250 slaves; killed 10 guerrillas, and mortally wounded Col. GARR. He lost one man—private STEWART, of the Seventeenth Indiana. He has hung 5 and shot 15 rebels, including a Second Lieutenant, caught with our uniform on, in accordance with the orders of Gen. ROSECRANS. Between his men and the rebels an unusually bitter hostility exists. They shoot his men (the reader will remember that they shot three last Winter, one of whom, after receiving four balls through various parts of his head and face, recovered) and his men hang them. MORGAN'S thieves were especially rancorous, as WILDER has been a terrible bugbear to them, and to their cowardly leader. The Colonel informed us that when MORGAN was near Corydon, in this State, he called at the house of Mrs. JONES, the mother of the Lieutenant-Colonel of the Seventeenth Indiana—one of WILDER'S regiments—and told her, as she wrote to the Colonel, that "he meant to go to Greensburgh, and burn WILDER'S property, and take his wife and put her on a Southern plantation among the negroes." He hasn't done it, however. In the fight at Hoover's Gap an act of heroism occurred which ought not to be forgotten. The Colonel saw it, and vouches for it in every particular. He says that Corporal MCREYNOLDS, of the Seventeenth Indiana, was shot through the heart, and as he fell, crying, with his last breath, "Boys, they have killed me—give them the devil," he unscrewed the cylinder of his Spencer rifle, which contains the charges, and threw it away, so that if the gun fell into the hands of the rebels they could not use it, and died immediately afterward. Such forethought and coolness in a man with but a half dozen seconds of life before him is wonderful. The regiment will send his body home, and erect a monument to his memory, at their own expense. Of the feeling in the army towards those who threaten to resist the draft, or have encouraged resistence to it, Col. WILDER says we of the loyal States have no conception. It is bitter, deadly, and almost uncontrollable. The soldiers declare with the utmost earnestness that when they come home they will kill all such men. When the news of the murder of Provost-Marshal SEVERS, by the Copperheads of Rush county, reached the army, WILDER had actually to put three men in irons to prevent them from going home to kill the murderers. This fact might be kept in mind by some of the most active of our home traitors with benefit, as their names are well known to every soldier in the army, and most heartily despised.

Col. WILDER desires us to say to young men who want to see active service, and plenty of it, to form guerrillas, and scout all through and around the rebel lines, that he has a splendid opening for them. He has four fine mountain howitzer, with carriages, caissons, harness, horses, ammunition, and everything complete, and he wants to raise 100 men to man them. The battery is to form part of his brigade, and we need hardly say that those who serve under WILDER will have enough to do, not of camp duty, drill ing and parading, but of fierce, dangerous and exciting service. He wants, if possible, to take back recruits for the battery when he rejoins the army in some ten days hence. This is a loud "call" for adventurous and daring men, and we hope it will be promptly responded to.

THE OCCUPATION OF HUNTSVILLE.

Correspondence of the Philadelphia Inquirer.

HEADQUARTERS MCCOOK'S CORPS, WINCHESTER, Tenn., July 16, 1863.

The report of the taking of Huntsville, Ala., by Maj.-Gen. STANLEY, is confirmed. He entered that city yesterday morning without opposition. He had captured some six hundred horses, two hundred of them having cavalry and riders.

We have also information from our outposts that the rebels about Bridgeport and Chattanooga have received information of the capture of Charleston by our forces. This may be true, and would rejoice our hearts, but we greatly fear that it is only an exaggerated report of the operations on Morris Island.

Gen. BRAGG'S army is very much reduced by desertion, and is supposed to contain about 18,000 or 20,000 men at present.

Gen. ROSECRANS is on a visit to Nashville, where he was received with great enthusiasm, as I learn. He has his Staff with him.

Gen. GORDON GRANGER is now Commandant of the District of the Cumberland, which comprises all the Department of the Cumberland north of the Duck River. He is hoped so to be an exhilarating and stirring officer, and has an important District to command. The Tennesseeans are becoming heartily disgusted with the war. They want peace.

TULLAHOMA, Saturday, July 18, 1863.

By a courier just from Huntsville, I learn that Gen. STANLEY captured some three hundred prisoners and a number of horses and mules, with as many contrabands riding them.

He seems to be able to go "right ahead," and you may soon expect to hear from him again.

AFFAIRS AT VICKSBURGH.

Amount of the Captures—Condition of the Rebels—The Investment of Jackson.

Correspondence of the Chicago Tribune.

VICKSBURGH, Thursday, July 16, 1863.

I send you an accurate statement of facts, giving more importance to the capture of Vicksburgh than was at first supposed. The number of prisoners, and amount of the munitions of war far exceed the expectations of those who have watched and waited at the rear of Vicksburgh so long. Before going into details, I desire to state what may be generally known, and can do me harm to reveal: Maj.-Gen. GRANT has command of the forces now investing Jackson—what is now called the front. Vicksburgh being the base. Maj.-Gen. MCPHERSON commands the fortifications of Vicksburgh, and Maj.-Gen. LOGAN commands the post of Vicksburgh. Very few departments for the transaction of local business are so well filled with efficient, gentlemanly subordinate officers as are those at the headquarters of Gens. GRANT, MCPHERSON and LOGAN. Gen. GRANT has his headquarters in town, and is the same quiet, thoughtful gentleman he was before his star was in the ascendant. Col. RAWLINS, his Adjutant-General, has an ear for every one and a hand to help. Gen. MCPHERSON was very fortunate in the selection of Lieut.-Col. JAMES WILSON for Provost-Marshal.

NUMBER OF PRISONERS.

After the surrender a Confederate officer estimated the force to be paroled at 21,000. Then we could hardly believe it would amount to more than 30,000. Late information proves that we fought at Port Gibson, Champion Hills and Black River Bridge a much larger force than we estimated at the time. As I have before written you, Gen. GRANT has wiped out an army of over sixty thousand men, who, when we landed in Mississippi, were scattered from Greenwood on the north to Port Gibson on the south. All that escaped were a few thousand under LOGANS, and they are now with JOHNSTON.

We killed and wounded a very large number, and several thousand deserted for their homes during the interim between the battle of Port Gibson and the siege of Vicksburgh. About thirty-five thousand retreated inside the works at Vicksburgh after the battle of the "Big Black," as the rebels call it. Nearly three thousand of this number were killed during the siege, or died of disease.

The whole number captured at the surrender will very safely state from 32,000. Of this number we have paroled 29,000 effective men. About 6,000 sick and wounded are to be paroled, and it is said they are to be taken up the Mobile to Monroe, La., where the rebel confederacy came to be located. Over two thousand five hundred refuse to be paroled, many of whom take the oath of allegiance, while others prefer going North as prisoners of war rather than go into a Southern parole camp. In one brigade of Louisiana troops, numbering about 1,200, 539 refused to be paroled—most of them officers and men, boldly averring that they would not fight any more. They are mostly of that class called Freedmen in Louisiana.

POLICY OF PAROLING.

The general opinion prevails that, aside from every other consideration but the one of converting the rebel army, the paroling and kind treatment of this large number of men has been a fine stroke of policy. The rebel officers view it in the same light, and are vexed in no small degree. There is great discontent among the men formerly comprising PEMBERTON'S army. The friction incident to the social intercourse of the two armies has been productive of much good. Many officers are infected by the general dissatisfaction of the men, and since the paroll many of them have deserted. First of all, they are disenchanted with the general appearance of things in the Southern Confederacy, caused by the flood of light and truth that so suddenly overwhelmed them when Vicksburgh fell. They had been shut out from the world for nearly two months, and did not know how disaster after disaster was being visited upon them along the whole line. Another cause is the complaint of "bad management of the whole thing by Old PEMBERTON," and this is almost universal. In this they are unjust in great part. Our officers concede to him both ability and energy. The long fight at the rear of Vicksburgh was made with energy and spirit. PEMBERTON has not shown the "white feather." He only yielded when circumstances compelled him. We honor that army as a worthy foe. Any army with equal advantages who can stand against the Army of the Tennessee, is worthy of a better cause than the rebels fight for, and it can hardly be found in rebeldom.

Still another, and more exclusive cause of discontent, is the confection of the many errors purposely instilled into the minds of the men by their leaders relative to the questions at issue, our purposes, &c., which has been effected by the free and easy intercourse of the two armies for over a week. These several causes have effectually destroyed the morale of PEMBERTON'S army. Confederate officers mourn over it, and relate their grievances to their sympathising friends. A lady living several miles in the country said to a Federal officer: "I understand our army has become very much demoralized since it has come in contact with yours; and I also hear that your men are spiriting our soldiers across the river since they have been paroled. An old friend, Col. ——, tells me he has not one man left to march out of Vicksburgh."

REBELS GOING HOME.

The object of Gen. PEMBERTON was to keep his army intact as much as possible, and take them to a parole camp in Alabama. The officers promised the men furloughs from that place, but they have been deceived too many times to catch at that. After the effective men had been paroled, it is said that several thousand belonging in Missouri, Arkansas, Louisiana and Texas escaped across the river very mysteriously. But few of these men intend to "report at the expiration of their leave."

THE OUTMARCH.

On the 13th inst., the army began to march out on the Baldwin's Ferry road, according to the terms of capitulation—one wagon to each regiment, field officers mounted with side arms, men with their knapsacks. I took a position two miles in the rear of Vicksburgh, at the house of JAMES FARQUHAR, near where the Warrenton road branches, and saw the remains of the once grand army straggle along by for two days.

THEY WANT TO GO HOME.

Hundreds ask the question, "Will your folks stop us if we go to Warrenton and try to cross the river?" We could only give them the answer, "Probably not, if you show your parole;" and hundreds soon thereafter took the Warrenton road, always keeping a good lookout for their officers. I am told that the woods are full of men all along the road to Black River, who are scattering in every direction to make the one point—"Home." These men who live in Mississippi, Alabama and Tennessee declare they are going home, and only wait until the column nears the desired haven, when they will be numbered among the deserters. I doubt whether Gen. PEMBERTON reaches parole camp with ten thousand men.

AN EDITOR COME TO GRIEF.

The Editor of the Vicksburgh Whig graced the rear of the caravan, mounted on a very poor steed, with an outrider behind to hold up (Editors never get intoxicated) the very large amount of poor whisky. Mr. Editor was trying to travel in a position perpendicular to the spinal vertebræ of the animal. It was fitting that he who had done so much to stir up and continue this unholy rebellion should adorn the pedal extremity of a defeated, demoralized army, passing in review before their enemy. He was demonstrative and vociferous upon the question of "rights." The last he was heard to say sounded very much mixed and muddled. "Jim FARQUHAR, who lives in there," pointing toward, or rather at, the house, "I know him—has no patriotism in his soul." Drunk or sober, ignoble still; fall to crushing each other when the days of trial come.

ORDNANCE.

The number of small arms or muskets that were taken will amount to 50,000 at least, and may go as high as 60,000. One hundred and nine field pieces, and thirty-three siege guns, mostly columbiads, were found on the river works, and in these is the gear. Many of the guns are very valuable. There is no way yet to compute the amount of ammunition, camp equipage, transportation trains, &c., taken. In depots and scows it would amount to a large sum. In the arsenal I saw a large number of the Mississippi bowie-knives, some six feet long. This is rather suggestive of reflection upon the usages of civilized warfare.

FROM JACKSON.

The latest information from Jackson represents JOHNSTON reinforced by all the Mobile force, but an insignificant portion, a part of BREckinridge's command, and some from BRAGG'S old army—making his effective force between 20,000 and 40,000. Deserters put it as low as 15,000 and as high as 75,000.

JOHNSTON is well intrenched behind redoubts and rifle-pits thrown up around the city about one mile out. GRANT turned upon him so quickly after the surrender that his plans for retreat were disarranged, and now he proposes to give us a fight. It is reported that a portion of our forces have crossed Pearl River; if true, we have the town invested. The situation is represented to be very similar to that at Vicksburgh in June—heavy artillery fightings, and sharp shooting along the line.

Our force is not large enough to invest it, though large enough to inspire the hope with many that JOHNSTON'S fate may yet be like the fate of PEMBERTON. I am confident there will be hard fighting before the right of possession is decided, and also confident that JOHNSTON will not only be satisfactorily whipped, but lose a large part of his army. JOHNSTON has heavy artillery and a good supply. He appears to use it better than PEMBERTON did—more judiciously and effectually.

GEN. LAUMAN'S REPULSE.

By an error of some one, our forces were repulsed on the 14th, at our extreme right, where Brig.-Gen. LAUMAN, of Iowa, commanded. For this error Gen. LAUMAN has been relieved of his command by Maj.-Gen. ORD, and goes North to-day. Gen. A. P. HOVEY takes command of his own and Gen. LAUMAN'S division. Gen. LAUMAN received orders to move forward cautiously at the right until he should reach the Jackson and New-Orleans Railroad, tear up a portion, and advance as far as possible without bringing on a general engagement. It is said that after tearing up the track some of his forces moved too rapidly forward. The enemy being concealed from view, the column was within short range before they discovered them. They instantly opened a heavy fire of artillery and musketry, and repulsed our forces with a loss of between three and four hundred. In a military sense, Gen. LAUMAN is responsible, whether he is justly so, I cannot say, from the information I now possess. Col. BAKER, of the Fifty-third Illinois, was killed, and Maj. LOOP, of the Forty-first Illinois, supposed mortally wounded, and left on the field. It is supposed that about one hundred of our loss was in prisoners, the remainder killed and wounded.

Several boats, the Lumberry among the number, have left for New-Orleans. It hardly seems possible that the "Father of Waters" is again at our control and no more blockades to run.

A FORCE AT NATCHEZ.

A sufficient force has been sent to Natchez to hold that point. Since the fall of Vicksburgh, the guerrillas on the banks have mostly disappeared. The defeat at Helena contributed much to effect their dispersion, and now that they cannot hold the river longer, it is to be hoped they will tire of their partisan warfare, and gracefully submit to their fate.

Gen. HASKIN, on the 12th inst., captured YAZOO City, with 250 prisoners and several batteries. It is not taken with a view to permanent occupation, and will be evacuated by the main force, after destroying such property as may be deemed proper.

The gunboat DeKalb, formerly the St. Louis, struck two torpedoes near the city. They exploded and tore off her bow. A small force will remain there until Admiral PORTER can remove his guns and machinery. It will require but a few days' time. Memphis papers report Jackson captured. This is not true.

ADDITIONAL ITEMS.

From the Cincago Journal, July 23.

An officer of the Fifteenth Illinois cavalry, who left Vicksburgh on the 19th, and who reached this city this morning, gives us the latest news from that locality.

Gen. LOGAN, as military governor of Vicksburgh, gives general satisfaction. The Seventeenth army corps, (MCPHERSON'S) is in and immediately around the city. All the rest of the troops have been sent elsewhere.

The Thirteenth army corps (ORD'S) left Jackson, Miss., on the 17th, in pursuit of JOHNSTON, who, it is supposed, is retreating toward Mobile. GARRARD'S cavalry was daily expected up from Port Hudson, to concentrate with ORD, against JOHNSTON.

Gen. SHERMAN had returned to Vicksburgh, after the rebel evacuation of Jackson, and his corps is by this time probably on its way to more important service.

Gen. A. P. HOVEY is in command of Jackson, and his division is there with him. As has already been announced, Gen. KIMBALL, with his brigade, had gone to Natchez, which he now occupies, and of which he is now Military Governor. The place will be permanently held.

There are 6,000 sick rebel soldiers and officers in Vicksburgh, and they are being moved as rapidly as possible to the camps of the paroled prisoners, which is about three miles southeast of Jackson. Our informant has no doubt that the real cause of the rebel surrender was the fact that their army was dying off at the rate of a hundred a day, from sickness occasioned by a lack of proper food. The city was found in a most filthy condition.

Gen. GRANT, in the sixty-five days' Vicksburgh campaign, captured 71,000 prisoners, 200 pieces of artillery and over $30,000,000 worth of public property.

Several steamers lying at the docks at Memphis and Vicksburgh are advertised to leave for New-Orleans, with freight and passengers. The trade and commerce of the river will be opened at once. Postmasters have been appointed for Vicksburgh and Natchez, and the mails will henceforth be sent regularly between those places and the North.

The Lessons of the Riot.

To the Editor of the New-York Times:

A writer of considerable note publishes a letter with the above title, over his nomme de plume signature, "Carl Benson," in the NEW-YORK TIMES of July 25. In this communication he affirms, as inferences to be drawn from the character and circumstances of the frightful disturbance of last week, that constitutional government has been put on trial; that it only needs about one more such riot as this to prove democratic institutions and universal suffrage (already much shaken in credit by the awful venality of our Corporation and Legislature) a failure, so far as this City is concerned; that, as things stand, the rioters have decidedly the best of it; or, under the most favorable view, it can only be called a drawn battle; that one more such riot will drive our citizens to the alternative of Vigilance Committees, à la California, or military rule—or rather, impel them to the latter through the former, as a temporary stage; and, finally, that we are on the brink of going through what the French went through in 1848—what made them take refuge in the tyranny of Louis NAPOLEON, and what makes a majority of them still cling to it, despite all its oppression, because the mob threatened them with a worse oppression, and because any fixed Government is better than the hourly anxiety and terror resulting from mob rule.

While sounding this note of warning against a catastrophe which he seems inclined to believe imminent, the writer in the TIMES expresses the opinion that, "partisan spite of rebel intrigue," together with "the doctrine of State Rights," are the influential causes of our troubles, and suggests, as a sufficient remedy, the rejection and obliteration of "this disorganizing and anarchy-breeding theory from our minds."

It is your correspondent's belief, concurrent with that of CARL BENSON, that the people of the United States stand on the verge of a fearful precipice; that the entire institutions of the country are threatened with assault; and, that unless we are wise enough to understand the nature of the attack, and apply the right remedy in time, the close of the year 1863 will surely see the Northern, as well as the Southern United States, one dismal scene of revolution, confusion, anarchy and bloodshed. If there is the slightest possibility that there may be good cause for this apprehension, it is well to give it considerate attention.

The causes which, in closer analysis than is made by the writer in the TIMES, produced the great New-York riot, lie deeper than the public have yet probed. They inhere in the nature of our civil polity, as hitherto conducted. Let us examine this statement.

It is one of the worst features of popular Government, for which no adequate remedy has yet been successfully adopted, that it holds out the most tempting inducements for wicked and designing men to deceive the ignorant and credulous masses, in order to gain their favor and their votes. They are not only strongly tempted to do this, but they are absolutely forced to do it if they would secure office. For as good and intelligent citizens will not elevate bad and disreputable men to places of power and trust, they have no resource but to endeavor to get official position through an appeal to the ignorant and the depraved. Political place being in this country the quickest, safest, surest road to honor, as well as one of the surest to wealth, the demagogues whom no sense of moral honesty withholds, have only to pity their cunning arts in order to gain the good will of the easily-deceived populace. If we add to this another fact, that men lacking in large measure the higher instincts are naturally drawn to choose their friends and find their sympathies among those like themselves, we perceive that every personal inducement tends, under the present operation of our political machinery, to urge the wicked, or even the selfish man, who may not be positively bad in his nature, but merely ambitious, to court, by any influential means, the favor of the masses.

But how gain the confidence and friendship of the crowd? Honest and well-meaning citizens who really have the good of the poorer multitude at heart, will be sure to denounce the scheming politician, whose sole object they know to be his own aggrandizement. Hence the necessity of undermining the respect and cordiality of the masses for the better positioned classes of community. The wily and adroit man, whom no sense of moral obligation restrains, who stops at no falsehood, and is shamed at no atrocious misrepresentations of character, soon accomplishes his object. His simple-minded and easily excited dupe is made to believe that the more comfortable citizens are his worst foes, robbing him of his earnings by commercial trickery, and completing his spoliation by invidious laws, militating against the poor. The laborer thus learns to look with suspicion upon that portion of community with whom his interests are mostly identified, to watch legal enactments cautiously for clauses injurious to his class, and to go or advise and assistance to the false men who have cheated him, and completed the isolation of his sympathies from the intelligent and benevolent community who are his natural protectors and alleviators.

The subject which, in the hands of these demagogues, has afforded the most plausible proof of their devotion to the interests of the poor, and of the neglect of those interests by the better situated people, has been the abolition of slavery. If slavery is abolished, they have averred, many of the negroes will come North, and then, of course, they will come into competition with white laborers. The Abolitionists will in fact employ them in preference to these. Thus white poor will be thrown out of their situations, and their wives and children must suffer in consequence. The efforts of the interested politician among the laboring classes on this point, have been encouraged and strengthened by a large number of wealthier citizens who, on account of their pecuniary interest in slavery, their pride of race, their want of sympathy with suffering, or for some other reason, were opposed to the emancipation of the negro. Hence the least developed of the poorer classes of the North have come to regard with a hostile eye the efforts in behalf of the colored people of the South, and to see in every movement for their freedom an attack upon their well-being. It is for this reason that numbers of even the better portion of our laborers have been so easily and so often induced to aid anti-slavery mobs and to oppose anti-slavery political measures.

Since the commencement of the present war, the party which has ever been the ardent opponent of negro emancipation has labored zealously to deceive the people into the belief that the war was the work of the Abolitionists on behalf of the colored man, brought about to abolish Slavery, carried on to abolish Slavery, perverted in to abolish Slavery, and even to destroy the Union, that this might be done. At every call for men to take the field, the orators and journals of this party have dinned into the ears of the ignorant and credulous masses, that it was all for the negro. At every fresh taxation they have responded to the groans of the poor, it is for the black man you are being burdened. And finally, when recruiting lagged and it became necessary to draft men for the war, the journals and the politicians howled the startled and shrinking throng: "Look! see what we have told you; it is to free the negro you are being torn from your family, leaving them without support. The negro, who, when free, will come North to struggle with you for the scanty pittance you now ear people at heart, and having her voters firm and confident in behalf of the truly wise, good and benevolent.

In the midst of suspense and agitation two things, then, are essential to our preservation. The prompt, relentless, energetic suppression of all endeavor to violate the laws, by unlawful means; and the equally prompt, tender and persistent endeavor to better the conditions of the people, in their material and physical conditions first,—in their intellectual and moral afterward,—or rather in all at once combined. In this way, and in this way only, shall we save the City and eventually the Republic to republican institutions, and rescue her from the anarchical rule of a mob, rendered desperate by a fancied sense of injustice and by the suffering of poverty, on the one hand, or from the strong arm and inflexible power of military despotism on the other.

DRAFT MATTERS.

The Draft in New-England.

The preparations necessary for the reception of the conscripts have been begun on Long Island, in Boston harbor, and tents and various things needed for the accommodation of the men were forwarded on Wednesday. There are now about four hundred, including the substitutes, who are ready to be sent down. Soldiers will be detailed to act as guards of the camp, and the conscripts will probably not be drilled in the use of the rifle until they reach the regiment to which they may be sent.

The Providence Journal says that sixteen substitutes escaped from the barracks, in that city, on Tuesday evening. The attempt was made by the whole body, who pushed violently against the door, carrying hinges, locks, and the entire door. This was done at guard relieving, which was known within the barracks by the beating of tattoo. The guard being totally unprepared, rallied as soon as possible, and with the prompt use of the bayonet, succeeded in driving the greater portion back. Seventeen passed and were fired upon, but so gun was discharged, the cap only exploding. One old soldier clubbed his musket and knocked a fugitive down, who was the only one secured.

The drafting for the First Congressional District proceeded in an orderly manner at New-Bedford on Wednesday. The section to be drawn for was the City of Fall River. Among the conscripts are JOHN W. DIMON, well known as a conductor on the Old Colony Railroad; WALTER PAINE, 3d, a prominent business man of the place, and GEORGE ROBERTSON, the editor of the Fall River Journal.

The drafted men from Natick have been discharged from service on this draft, the town having already furnished more than its present quota under previous calls.

In the First District of Providence, on Thursday, 37 drafted men were passed who will go, pay or send some one; 1 commuted, and 132 were exempted for various causes, as follows: physical disability, 56; aliens, 33; non-residents, 7; only sons of widows, 7; parents elect to exempt, 6; unsuitable age, 13; of families of which two are already in the service, 3; now in service, 4; fathers of motherless children, 3. The whole number discharged from the draft so far in this district is 1,200. In the Second District 3 were accepted, 35 substitutes were taken, 5 were exempted for physical disability and 4 for other causes.

JOHN A. WALKER, Henry Colt, W. M. Root, Owen Coogan, James Francis, Josiah Carter, and William R. Plunkett were appointed a Committee at a recent public meeting at Pittsfield, to ascertain who of the drafted from that place are entitled, from peculiar personal or family considerations, to relief, and to take measures to provide substitutes for such persons, or, in case of failure, to pay the money necessary to commute for their services, and to take such action as it shall deem proper to obtain the aid of the town, or of the individual citizens, to secure the proposed object. The Committee was authorized to take all proper measures to procure a legal meeting of the town to decide what action the town will take in reference to providing support for the families of those who may go as conscripts or substitutes, and what bounty money it will offer for substitutes for drafted citizens.

Thirty-two out of the thirty-three members of the Wareham Mutual Draft Insurance Company were drafted. This is a case, certainly, where there will be no perplexing questions as to the division of the remainder.

Wednesday night the East Bridgewater drafted men procured good music and a flag, formed themselves into a company and marched through the principal streets. A better looking or a more patriotic company never turned out in the town.

The City Council of Cambridge has voted to furnish the same aid to families of drafted men as to those who enter the service by voluntary enlistment. The United States Government gives a bounty of $150 to drafted men, and pays them $13 per month, which, with the aid rendered them by the State, will give a poor man about as much compensation as he would be likely to earn if he remained at home. These facts should be more generally known.

The Governor of New-Hampshire has issued an order requiring commanders of companies of volunteer militia to "immediately order their companies to be armed, equipped and provided with twenty rounds of ammunition," to "hold their commands in readiness for immediate service within the State," and to make requisitions upon the Quartermaster-General for all necessary arms, equipments and ammunition. The Governor of that State don't intend to be caught napping if any disturbance breaks out.

The Boston Transcript says:

"It is understood that Gen. MEADE's army will be at once recruited to the maximum from the drafted men. The commanders of the various regiments will make requisitions for the numbers required to fill their ranks, and detachments will be forwarded accordingly. Lieut.-Col. CONNER, of the Maine Seventh, arrived in this city last evening, on his way to Portland under orders to "receive and conduct" drafted men from the conscript camp in Maine, to the seat of war.

The New-Haven Journal of Saturday says:

"Our worthy Town Treasurer, JOHN ENGLISH, Esq., finds it impossible to raise money from the banks, under the vote passed at the late town meeting, and consequently there are no funds in the treasury to meet the requirements of that vote. There seems to be some doubt as to the legality of the doings of this meeting, and it is probable that further action will have to be taken. It seems to us, after some thought upon the subject, that it would be better for the town to vote $300 to each drafted man, and allow him either to go or obtain a substitute on the best terms that he may. This would amount to the same thing as voting a bounty, which all agree would be legal."

Proceedings in New Bedford, Mass.

From the New-Bedford (Mass.) Mercury, July 24.

The draft for this city was concluded at a quarter before 12 o'clock, amidst loud cheers. Throughout the proceedings the large audience was in the best possible humor, evidently enjoying the announcements, as keenly as if they were listening to the quips, and witnessing the drolleries of a first-class comedian. As the name of a party in the hall, or of any person well known to the crowd, was rung out, there was an explosion of cheers.

But one clergyman, Rev. W. J. POTTER, of the Unitarian Church, was drafted. The Bar furnished no member, the Medical Faculty but one, who is already in the service, and the Pill and Pestle Club contributed one. Among the names of the drafted is that of JEFFERSON DAVIS. We hope he may be able to go, and be in at the death of the other JEFF. GEORGE A. BOURNE was drawn—not the one who is always "going, going," but a cordwainer rejoicing in that name. We learn, however, that the Major took occasion to boast among his friends of this presumptive evidence of his juvenility; though we do not learn that he proposed to stand in the stead of his namesake.

The pressman and two compositors in the Mercury office appear with red ribbons, the badge of honor adopted by the drafted.

A large number of merchants and clerks were drafted. In fact all classes are represented in the list, the inspection of which will satisfy our city readers of the fairness of the draft. Five returned members of the Fifth battery, five of the city watch, and several returned members of the Eighteenth regiment were drawn.

The agents of the Mutual Insurance Companies watched the proceedings with special interest. The proportion drafted, however, is not large, and the stock in all is good, there being ample funds to pay the commutations, and leave handsome donations to the Soldiers' Relief Society.

Of the 80 conscripts from Nantucket and the Vineyard, who presented themselves to the Board of Enrollment in this city, yesterday, 58 received exemption papers, 2 paid up, 2 furnished substitutes, and 18 passed.

Orders were received yesterday not to exempt men for being less than five feet three inches in height. This makes a hitch in the draft.

About 150 drafted men came from the Cape and the Vineyard yesterday to be examined.

Mr. DAM will commence to furnish the rations to the conscripts at Pierian Hall to-day, a sufficient number having arrived to set a special table for them.

Eleven members of the Union Drill Club were honored by the draft yesterday.

The Draft in Rochester.

From the Rochester Express, July 24.

The fact that volunteers sent in excess of the former quotas are to be credited to the District or County on the draft, (and which the Express alone of the city journals has noticed,) is one of the greatest importance here. The whole number called for from this Congressional District is 2,015, of which this county is already credited with 282 excess, and Orleans County 108, making 370 to be deducted. It is impossible to give with correctness an estimate at present of the number who have gone since, but it is known to be several hundred, probably enough in this county at least to lessen the burden of the draft at least one-half.

In Pittsburgh.

From the Gazette, July 24.

THE DRAFT.—We understand that the amount paid in by parties drafted in this district already exceeds $120,000. This will make a liberal bounty fund, and will enable the Government to supply the places of those who paid it with volunteers.

NEGRO SUBSTITUTES.

From the Pittsburgh Chronicle.

The vagaries of the Provost-Marshal-General's Office are somewhat amusing. Following close upon the order relating to the examination of parties claiming exemption for physical debility, comes a decree that colored substitutes are not a fair equivalent for drafted white men, and their acceptance by the Board of Enrollment is therefore forbidden. The order says: "Any person who is equivalent to the person drafted may be received as a substitute; but a negro, under existing laws, is not a military equivalent." This shows that a drafted white man can offer a negro for a substitute, but a white man cannot. The order was promulgated on Saturday, and produced a marked effect in the substitute market. Negro substitutes, which up to this had been above par, became a drug in the market, and able-bodied fellows, who but an hour before could have commanded from $300 to $400, now offered themselves at $150 without receiving a bid. Those who made arrangements for supplying colored substitutes will have other to furnish white men or pay $300, and as several of them were incautious enough to make advances on the strength of these arrangements, they will now lose their investment. There is not much demand for substitutes to-day, the people generally having settled down into the expectation that the payment of the $300 commutation fee will exempt a man for "three years or the war" quite as effectually as if he furnished a substitute.

Volunteers Credited.

The Mayor of Syracuse telegraphed some days since to Washington, to know whether volunteers enlisted or to be enlisted from the county would be credited on the draft. He has received the following reply:

WASHINGTON, July 22, 1863.

To D. Bookstaver, Mayor:

Volunteers will be received on your quota up to time of draft, and all who have been mustered into the United States service up to that time must be credited on your quota by your Board of Enrollment. I cannot tell when the draft will take place in your city.

JAMES B. FRY, Provost-Marshal-General.

In Chemung County.

Correspondence of the New-York Times.

BINGHAMTON, Thursday, July 23, 1863.

The draft took place in Elmira a day or two since, and instead of producing any riotous feelings occasioned almost a jubilee. Some of the most prominent men were included among the conscripts. A procession was improvised, and the most exuberant demonstrations followed. The following resolutions were unanimously adopted—which I commend to the Copperheads for their comfort and consolation:

Whereas, The Government of the United States, for the purpose of assisting in preserving itself against the destroying effects of an organized domestic foe, has seen fit to institute a draft, and

Whereas, We, through the favor of kind fortune, have been each awarded a prize in this great lottery, therefore be it

Resolved, That we the drafted men of Elmira, loving our Union, our Constitution, and our flag, hereby declare that, in our opinion, this action in the Government is necessary and just.

Resolved, That, claiming to be loyal men, we will not by word or deed, by thought or action, offer resistance to the draft; but will respond in a manner that shall be proper and satisfactory, to this call of patriotic duty.

Resolved, That if at any time unlawful resistance be offered to this legal conscription, we will, if called upon, spring to the defence of the Government, and will use every means placed at our disposal to put down all who so far forget themselves as to win the title of traitors and rioters.

Resolved, That we hope and earnestly believe from its baptism of blood and fire the country shall come forth purified, and with new greatness, and through the blessing of God, again, forever and immortal in justice.

"The Star Spangled Banner in triumph shall wave
O'er the land of the free and the home of the brave."

A Large Number of Leaders Caught.

FURTHER ARRESTS OF PARTIES ENGAGED IN THE RIOTS.

JOHN SMITH was arrested yesterday by Officer CARROLL, on a warrant issued by Coroner NAUMANN charged with having caused the death of MARTIN DALEY, by shooting him with a pistol, on the evening of Tuesday, July 15. A large company of men and boys, of which SMITH is said to have been a leader, made an attack on DALEY's house, No. 159 Greenwich-street. They plundered it of everything valuable and then undertook to set it on fire. While DALEY was trying to protect his property, SMITH shot him in the abdomen, from the effects of which he died a day or two after. The testimony given upon the inquest has been heretofore published in the TIMES. The prisoner was committed, to the Tombs to await the action of the Grand Jury.

JOHN F. WELLS, an Irishman, aged 29 years, a painter, was arrested yesterday by Sergeant WEITZ, of the Seventeenth Precinct, charged with having, on Monday and Tuesday, the 13th and 14th inst., cut down a large number of telegraph poles, in the Seventeenth and Eighteenth Precincts, and at the same time stealing the telegraph wire. A quantity of the latter article was found in his possession. He was committed for trial.

Officer MCCONNELL of the Twentieth Precinct, arrested WM. WATSON, a sailor, on the charge of threatening to burn buildings in that Ward during the riot week, and also on the charge of extorting money from citizens by means of threats. He was committed by Justice QUACKENBUSH.

Sergt. FORSHAY, of the Twenty-first Precinct, arrested JOHN STAHEL. Mr. JOHN J. DOW is one of the witnesses against this prisoner. On the afternoon of Monday, the 13th inst., the rioters visited Mr. Dow's residence, and after robbing it of everything of value, they set fire to it and in a short time it was destroyed. It was a fine brown-stone house, situated in Lexington-avenue, between Forty-fourth and Forty-fifth streets, and was furnished throughout with choice and expensive furniture. An adjoining house was also entirely destroyed.

STAHEL is recognized by Mr. Dow as having been one of the leaders of a large company of men and boys engaged in the crimes of robbery and arson. The prisoner, when confronted by his accusers, admitted that he stole from the house in question a large silver pitcher and several other articles; that he immediately handed them over to his father, SEBASTIAN STAHEL. The latter took the goods to a woman, named THOMPSON, residing at No. 644 West street, who secreted them in her room. They were found at this place on Saturday and fully identified by Mr. Dow. Upon this statement of the case the father was also taken into custody. After a preliminary examination at the Jefferson Market Police Court, Justice QUACKENBUSH committed the father and son for trial, in default of $500 bail each.

THOMAS COONEY was arrested by Officer ARCHIBALD, of the Twenty-second Precinct, charged with being a leader of the rioters, and also with having stolen a large quantity of carpet from Allerton's Hotel, (Bull's Head,) on the afternoon of Monday, the 13th inst. It will be recollected that this well-known hotel was sacked and robbed of everything it contained, and afterward set on fire and burned to the ground. The rioters had no shadow of a reason for the commission of the outrages which were here perpetrated. Mr. ALLERTON was not especially obnoxious to any of those who made pretences that the riot was commenced and carried on as a matter of opposition to the draft. When the leaders entered his house on Monday afternoon, they drank all the liquor in the bar, and then rushed up stairs, and through all parts of the premises, pillaging and stealing everything they could lay their hands on; and when there was nothing more to steal, the torch was applied simultaneously in different parts of the house. Not until the flames were spreading in all directions would these miscreants allow the firemen to use a hose or come near the premises. The carpet found in COONY's possession is very valuable, and is proved to have been taken by him from the parlors of the hotel. An expensive clock and a feather bed were also found on the prisoner—all stolen from the same place.

Justice QUACKENBUSH committed him to prison in default of $2,000 bail.

WM. RIDBY was arrested by Officers WILSON and SPEAR, of the Eighth Precinct, charged on the affidavit of CHAS. F. SHEPARD, of No. 523 Broome-street, with arson in the first degree. It is stated that on the night of Tuesday, the 14th inst., RIDBY was the leader of a large company of men and boys, who set fire to some tenement houses in Sullivan-street, known as "The Arch," and at that time occupied by numerous families of colored people. RIDBY carried a large bag of straw; others carried wood, old barrels and other combustible material. After the houses had been stoned, and the windows and doors broken in, the prisoner piled his straw in a hallway and then caused camphene or burning fluid to be poured over it. The torch was then applied. Just at this moment several companies of firemen appeared on the ground, and after great exertions succeeded in extinguishing the flames, before much damage had been done. Justice QUACKENBUSH committed this prisoner to the Tombs without bail.

PETER FINK and SARAH FINK, his wife, were also committed yesterday, by the same Justice, on the charge of rioting and stealing property from the buildings burned on the first day of the riot, in Broadway, between Twenty-eighth and Twenty-ninth streets. A large amount of property, consisting of trunks, cot-beds, bedding, boots and shoes, tables, books, &c., were found in the possession of the prisoners. They were committed in default of $1,000 bail each. A German, named SPRINGSTEIN, was also committed on a similar charge.

Recovery of a Valuable Lot of Goods.

IMPORTANT TO SUFFERERS OF THE RIOT.

Officers STEVENSON and KELLY, of the Twenty-ninth Precinct, reported, yesterday, that on Saturday evening last they conveyed to the Station-house of that Precinct a large and valuable lot of goods, which were recovered by them from house No. 533 Third-avenue. The following is a list of a portion of the stolen articles: One large chest, well filled; one small chest; one large trunk; two small trunks; several carpet-rugs; a number of fine table-spreads; a large quantity of ladies' boots and shoes; numerous decanters, wash-pitchers, mantel ornaments, plated silver-ware of every description, consisting of cups, teapots, sugar-bowls, knives, forks, spoons, &c., &c.; also female wearing apparel of the most costly kind, such as silk dresses, shawls, furs, laces, &c., besides a great amount of other goods impossible to enumerate.

The Police report that these goods are mostly new, and are no doubt the proceeds of the robberies in the up town wards committed during the late riots. All persons who have been sufferers in this way, are requested to call either at the Central office, or at the Station-house of the Twenty-sixth Precinct, where they may obtain further information.

Relief of the Sufferers by the Riot.

An adjourned meeting of the contributors to the fund for the relief of the members of the Police, Fire and Military Departments who were sufferers by the late riot, was held on Saturday, July 25, at noon, at the rooms of the Chamber of Commerce. L. W. JEROME presided, and Capt. BYRAM NYE was appointed Secretary.

The following resolution, offered by Mr. H. J. RAYMOND, was adopted:

Resolved, That the following gentlemen be appointed a Committee to coöperate with the Mayor in relieving the immediate necessities of those members of the Police, Fire and Military Departments who have suffered in defending the City during the recent riots and that $70,000 of the fund subscribed be placed at their disposal for that purpose:

T. C. ACTON, Commissioner of Police.
JOHN DECKER, Chief Engineer Fire Department.
Col. VERMILYEA.
ISAAC BELL.
GEORGE T. TALLMAN.

Mr. RAYMOND then offered the following resolution which was adopted:

Resolved, That a Committee of five be appointed to consider the expediency of consenting, on the basis of this subscription, and with whatever of the fund may prove to be in excess of the necessities of the sufferers for whom it was intended to provide, a permanent fund for the relief of such cases as may arise under similar circumstances hereafter, and that said Committee report on the subject at the next meeting of the subscribers to this fund.

The following gentlemen were appointed as such Committee:

H. J. Raymond, Shepherd Knapp,
Col. Stebbins, F. S. Winston,
F. B. Cutting.

On motion of Gen. WETMORE, the President and Secretary were added to both Committees.

The meeting then adjourned.

LEONARD W. JEROME, Chairman.
BYRAM NYE, Secretary.

These sums have been paid over to the Treasurers of these respective funds.

The Warehouse Crash in Greenwich-street.

MARVELOUS ESCAPE OF THREE MEN.

The falling in on Saturday afternoon of the warehouse occupied by Messrs. PHELPS & ADAMS, on the southeast corner of Greenwich and Morris streets, of which an account was given yesterday, is attributed, the occupants state, by builders and others capable of judging, to some defect in its construction in the centre. It was new, completed about June 1, and leased by Messrs. PHELPS & ADAMS with the assurance that it was capable of being fully stored with flour, and at no time had they suspicion or intimation of its being unsafe. At the time of the accident it was partially stored with flour, tobacco, whisky, &c., and storage men say, well stored. The loss to the firm is not ascertained, but is certainly large: that to those having goods on storage will be small. Messrs. PHELPS & ADAMS have transferred their office temporarily to Dr. WALKER's, opposite.

When the crash came there were three men, MORRIS FAY, DANIEL HAY and PHILIP DUNN, to the rear of the third loft moving flour. All the floors settled toward the centre, three times in rapid succession, and then went down with a roar. At the first settling the men were thrown in among the hogsheads, barrels, bales, &c., which all fell to the centre. PHILIP DUNN was covered in by the flour barrels, and had time to knock out the heads of one of them and crawl through to daylight; scarcely had he done this, ere the second and third came, which took him and his associates, with all the goods and the added wreck of the building to the first floor, from whence they were actually thrown through the door on to Greenwich-street, entirely uninjured. Their escape can be justly termed marvelous. Whitened, from head to foot, because of his trip through the flour barrel, and looking like a ghost, DUNN emerged from the ruins. Messrs FAY says, that after the first crash, and among the barrels, &c., he addressed himself to prayer; and then made an effort to extricate himself. Hardly had he made the attempt before he was coming down among the ruins. In the fall they were all nearly stifled by the fumes of whisky, &c., from the crushed barrels below. Mr. PHELPS of the firm, with one or two others, were in the office at the time, and on the first crash escaped to the street.

GENERAL CITY NEWS.

FATAL SHOOTING ACCIDENT.—Coroner WILDEY held an inquest yesterday on the body of a girl named ADELIA CUNNINGHAM, aged 11 years, who was accidentally shot, on Saturday evening, by a pistol in the hands of her brother. The father of the deceased is a policeman of the Seventeenth Precinct, and resides at No. 340 East Eleventh-street. On Saturday afternoon he gave his son a revolver, with instructions to clean it. While the son was in the act of performing this duty, one of the barrels was discharged. The ball passed through one of his fingers and lodged in the neck of his sister, who was standing about three feet from him. She died almost instantly.

THE RIVER AND HARBOR MONITORS.—The new class of Monitors, thirty-seven in all, which are now building for river and harbor defence, are spoken of by scientific men as able to meet all requirements. Some are building here, and are being rapidly urged to completion. It is expected that all will be finished by January. Capt. ERICSSON's Superintending Engineer, W. K. THOMAS, Esq., of this City, has been appointed inspector of iron-clad steamers now being constructed.

THE SIXTH REGIMENT.—Companies B and E of the Sixth regiment, N. Y. N. G., are ordered to assemble in fatigue uniform at the regimental armory, at 8 o'clock this morning. Capt. MITTNACHT, of Company E, will assume command. The above companies will relieve Companies D, F and H.

PRECAUTIONARY MEASURES.—A detachment of troops from several regiments in the Army of the Potomac arrived here yesterday, for the purpose of taking charge of the drafted men, also capturing conscripts who may escape. The troops will be quartered in parts of this State, Vermont and Connecticut.

PERSONAL.—Unitted States Senator CONNERS, of California, arrived here yesterday morning by the Champion. He is stopping at the Fifth-avenue Hotel.

BROOKLYN NEWS.

THE DRAFT.—There has been very little excitement about the draft for some days past, it being generally understood that the Common Council will make a sufficient appropriation to release all such as do not wish to go by procuring substitutes. It is thought that the quota of Kings County can be raised by paying $300 bounty to each man.

Notwithstanding the disorderly scene in New-York, and apprehensions of violence in this city, the Provost-Marshals of the Second and Third Congressional Districts have been busily engaged in augmenting their lists. The navy yard and large factories have been revisited, and large numbers of names have been added, amounting in all to over one thousand. The entire number liable to draft in the Third Congressional District is something over 20,000.

BROOKLYN CITY MORTALITY.—The total number of deaths in this city last week was 177, the principal diseases being cholera infantum, 39; convulsions and congestion of the brain, 13 each; marasmus, 12; scarlet fever, 7; diarrhœa, 7; dysentery, 3; consumption, 16, &c. Adults, 53; children, 124. Natives of United States, 142; Ireland, 18; Germany, 8; other countries, 9.

SLOOP ON FIRE.—The sloop Westchester, of West Farms, P. PHILLIPS, Captain and owner, lying at the foot of Pacific-street, was set on fire on Saturday, caused by the wetting of some unslacked lime. She was loaded with lumber, lath, bricks and lime. The vessel was scuttled to save her from destruction. Loss about $300—no insurance.

DROWNED IN A CISTERN.—A girl named EMMA ZELLER, 9 years of age, accidentally fell into an old cistern in Twenty-first-street, near Fourth-avenue, Gowanus, on Saturday, and was drowned. The body was not discovered until some time afterward.

THE STATE MILITIA.—The regiments of this city, which were sent to Pennsylvania, have all been mustered out of the general service. They are still retained, however, for duty in the State.

ST. JAMES' SUNDAY-SCHOOL.—The pupils of St. James' Catholic Sunday-School, under charge of Father MCDONALD, were yesterday dismissed for one month. The closing exercises consisted of addresses, and vocal and instrumental music.

THE COURTS.—A special term of the Supreme Court will be commenced on the first Monday in August before Judge LOTT. The other Courts have adjourned over until September.

Williamsburgh.

INCENDIARY FIRES.—During Sunday, three fires, all believed to be the work of design, occurred

Brooklyn, E. D. The fifth was discovered at the Church, corner of Keap and Division streets. The Divine-street, near Union-avenue. The building, which was a frame structure, was entirely destroyed, involving a loss of about $1,000. About two hours later, flames were discovered bursting forth from the varnish factory of Messrs. FAY & WOODS, in North Ninth-street, near Sixth, but only slight side damage resulted. Subsequently, this same building was again fired, and extinguished almost immediately afterwards.....Last evening, at 7 o'clock, the match manufactory of Mr. FAYE, in Wythe-st, near Lorimer-street, was found to be on fire. The building was of brick, two stories in height, and was completely gutted. Loss $1,000; insured.

LAUNCH.—On Saturday the steamer Meta, intended for the Shrewsbury River service, was launched from the ship-yard of EDWARD LAWSON, at Hunter's Point. She possesses points of great speed and light draught.

MONDAY, July 27—A. M.

The Foreign Import Trade of the past week was unusually active, partly in consequence of the interruption to the Custom-house entries of the week before. The Export return (made up early in the week) is smaller than usual, from the difficulty of clearing vessels the week before. The Export of Specie is again large, and the demand for Gold thus created, together with the daily wants of the Importers to pay the Customs, caused a rally from the low quotation of Saturday week of 3@3½ ₩ cent. The Exports and Customs of the fortnight amount to $6,171,000, and it will be seen this afternoon how far these movements have affected the stock of Gold Coin in Bank. Some considerable disbursements have been making from the Sub-Treasury in payment of the July interest on the Public Debt, and numerous parcels of $200,000@$300,000 each have come in from New-Orleans and California. The price of Exchange ruled 135@140 through the various changes in Gold during the week, and closed 139½ ₩ cent. The price of Money to the Brokers fell to 5@6 ₩ cent., and in the absence of sufficient employment in this way, the line of Deposits at the Treasury on 5 ₩ cent. interest on 10 days' notice, after 30 days, has been rapidly filling up. The popular subscriptions to the Government 6 ₩ cent. Loan of 1882 at par have also largely increased again, and $6,092,650 on this account was received at the New-York office of the Treasury. Beginning the week with about half a million per day, these subscriptions have reached a million and a half per day, for the greater part through the Loan Agency of the Treasury. The Department is still 10 or 12 days in arrear in the delivery of the Bonds, but arrangements, we understand, are making to reduce the delay to 5 or 6 days. To meet the heavy popular demand for this Stock, the labor of the Register of the Treasury and the force in his office is now equal to 16 working hours per day.

The Stock Market for the week shows a further considerable rise on the Share list, most of the New-York and Western Roads being about 4 ₩ cent. higher than on Saturday week, under an increased volume of speculation. The recently introduced Western lines, reorganized on a basis which it is hoped will soon enable nearly the whole of them to pay dividends upon their common shares, have gone up from 5 to 8 ₩ cent. The Government Stocks of 1881 have also advanced ¼@½ ₩ cent., although it was expected on the first great fall in Gold two weeks ago that the Foreign orders would be suspended. Such, however, is not the case, and some of these orders extend to the 5-20 years' Stock of 1882 by subscription at par.

The price of Gold Coin opened, Saturday, ½@¾ ₩ cent. lower than the day before, but subsequently advanced on the report of the day's export of $1,618,000, full 1 ₩ cent., closing on the Street, at 4 o'clock, at 126@127 ₩ cent. Exchange, after the sailing of the steamers, was held for 139@139½ ₩ cent. The total export of Gold and Silver for the week, including $300,000 transferred from one of the New-Orleans steamers to the Mercury packet, amounts to $1,706,000. The price of Money to the Stock Brokers was more generally 5 than 6 ₩ cent. In some instances balances were placed by lenders until this week as low as 4 ₩ cent. The deposits with the Treasury, for the day, on 5 ₩ cent. interest, reached the large sum total of $1,618,550. The receipts on account of the New Loan of 1882 (6-20 years' Stock,) are $1,336,500. The Customs, $236,000.

The day's business at the office of the Assistant Treasurer, United States, New-York, are as follows: Receipts, $4,814,900; payments, $3,126,546; balance, $24,204,578.

The Stock Board held but one session on Saturday. The Share market was somewhat irregular, and the extreme of prices of Friday did not hold on the New-York and the Western Roads, but after the adjournment, the bidding on the Street was firmer, and among the New-York shares, Harlem had a further rise to 115 ₩ cent., and among the Western, Illinois Central to 113½ ₩ cent. Michigan Central, and Prairie Du Chien, were also higher than yesterday, and Erie old stock rose to 101½ ₩ cent. The following prices were made at 4 o'clock, as comp

NEWS OF THE DAY.

THE REBELLION.

MORGAN is captured at last—himself and the whole of his force. Yesterday morning Major WAY, with 250 of the Ninth Michigan cavalry, forced him to an engagement near Salineville, Ohio, and routed him, capturing 240 prisoners, MORGAN himself, however, escaping with 300 men; but they were all subsequently captured by Gen. SHACKLEFORD near New-Lisbon. The General announces his good fortune in a dispatch to Gen. BURNSIDE, which we publish elsewhere.

We published yesterday, from the Richmond papers of the 23d, three dispatches from BEAUREGARD, giving an account of a second attack and repulse of our forces at Fort Wagner, on Morris Island. The first dispatch, dated at Charleston, 18th, states that Fort Wagner had been bombarded furiously all day by the gunboats and land batteries. The second dispatch, dated the 19th, states that after a furious bombardment of eleven hours, the National forces assaulted the enemy's position "desperately and repeatedly," but were repulsed with great slaughter, the rebel loss being slight, but including many valuable officers. The third dispatch, dated the 22d, states that we commenced shelling again on the 21st. The rebel loss on the 18th is put at 150 killed and wounded; ours at about 2,000, including prisoners, nearly 800 having been buried under a flag of truce. The statements of these dispatches are mainly corroborated by our own accounts, received by the steamship Arago, which arrived at this port last evening. BEAUREGARD'S statement of the National losses is found to be exaggerated—about 1 500 will probably cover it. The fighting was very severe, and at one time a portion of our forces gained the interior of the rebel works, but the advantage was lost and the assault failed.

A special dispatch from Leavenworth, Kansas, informs us that on the 14th inst. a severe fight occurred at Elk Creek, fifty miles south of Fort Gibson, between the national forces under Gen. BLUNT, numbering 2,400 men, with twelve pieces of artillery, and the rebels under Gen. COOPER, numbering 5,000, resulting in the complete rout of the rebels. Gen. BLUNT marched fifty miles in twenty-four hours, and attacked COOPER immediately. Two rebel guns were dismounted and captured, and the enemy briskly fled, pursued by our forces.

We have this morning some intimation of what has been done by the Army of the Potomac during the past week. Our troops have kept up a close scrutiny of LEE'S movements, and have succeeded, by rapid marches, in baffling several attempts made by him to pass through the gaps of the Blue Ridge. He tried successively Snicker's, Ashby's and Manassas Gaps, but found a strong National force at each, and at the last two was driven back with loss. It is believed that he is now moving rapidly toward Staunton, up the Shenandoah Valley. Our cavalry have, as usual, been very active. At Chester Gap they recaptured 1,100 of the cattle stolen by the enemy, and several hundred sheep, and a large number of horses have also been recaptured.

A dispatch received by Gen. SCHENCK, at Baltimore, dated headquarters of the Army of the Potomac, Front Royal Saturday, announces an engagement with the enemy's rear guard on the day previous, and the disappearance of the whole rebel army on Saturday morning—supposed en route to Culpepper and Orange Court-house.

The Washington Republican of Saturday evening has the following paragraph: "Information was received in the city yesterday which confirms our opinion that LEE has been resting on the upper Potomac, after crossing from Maryland, to enable his army to get away safely all the plunder collected in the Boonsboro and Cumberland Valleys. It is known that he has also been gathering all the grain of the new crop in the Shenandoah Valley, and he is now moving with this plunder quietly and carefully toward Richmond. Day before yesterday some of our forces captured from the rebels an immense drove of cattle, including oxen and cows, and five hundred sheep. Some of these were stolen in Pennsylvania."

Gen. FOSTER'S official report of the results of the cavalry expedition in North Carolina has been received at the War Department, from which it appears that the rebels have not told us half the story. In addition to the railroad bridge at Rocky Mount, on the Wilmington and Weldon Railroad, which it will take weeks to replace, and the mills, both flouring and cotton, already mentioned, our forces destroyed an engine and a train of cars, twenty-five wagons filled with stores and munitions, an armory and machine shops; and at Tarboro, two steamboats and one iron-clad in process of construction, besides a saw-mill, a train of cars, and large quantities of subsistence and ordnance stores. About a hundred prisoners were also captured, and some three hundred horses and mules and three hundred contrabands. And all this with a loss in killed, wounded and missing, of only about twenty-five men, though our force was skirmishing almost constantly

It is reported by persons who arrived at Cairo from Vicksburgh, yesterday, that Jackson, Miss., has been burned by our forces, and that the pursuit of JOE JOHNSTON has been given over for the present.

Admiral PORTER has officially informed the Navy Department of the result of the expedition recently sent by him through the navigable waters of the Red River country. The enemy appear to have been taken completely by surprise. Two fine steamers laden with stores were captured, and two others were burned by the rebels to prevent their falling into our hands. Large quantities of ammunition were also captured. At Harrisonburgh, on the Red River, a very strong fort was found, on a considerable elevation, which could not be reduced by wooden gunboats, which alone composed the expedition.

Major-Gen. T. W. SHERMAN and Brig-Gen. SHEPLEY were among the passengers by the Columbia, which arrived from New-Orleans on Saturday. The news is but one day later, and is of no importance.

Two prize steamers arrived at Philadelphia on Friday, the Kate Dale, captured by the gunboat R. R. Cuyler off Tortugas, and the Lizzie, captured by the Santiago de Cuba off Abaco.

FROM EUROPE.

By the arrival of the steamships City of New-York at this port, and Scotia off Cape Race, we receive advices from Europe one week later—to the 19th inst. The City of New-York's news was published in full in yesterday's TIMES. A telegraphic summary of the Scotia's news is given this morning. A report had reached England by the Barbadoes steamer that the California steamship Moses Taylor had been captured by the Alabama, which thus secured a million dollars in gold. The report is of course without any foundation whatever. No such amount of treasure has been shipped on New-York for several months. Our London files by the City of New-York bring us the proceedings of the British House of Commons on the 13th, the occasion when the debate on Mr. ROEBUCK'S motion for the recognition of the South was to have been continued. The news expected by that gentleman from America not having arrived, he concluded to withdraw his motion, and after some desultory debate the matter was dropped. In the course of the debate Mr. LINDSAY took occasion to give his promised version of the interview of himself and Mr. ROEBUCK with the French Emperor. It does not differ from that already given. Another call was made on the 14th, in the House of Lords, for information regarding the case of the Margaret and Jessie, fired into on the Bahama coast by the gunboat Rhode Island, but Earl RUSSELL had no further information to give. The news of the battles of Gettysburgh had been received, and caused considerable sensation. There was much anxiety for the details. The English journals generally accord much praise to the Union troops for their steadiness and valor. The London Times, however, cannot see the ground for Mr. LINCOLN'S hopeful anticipations, and says that looking to Vicksburgh and Port Hudson the chances are "decidedly against the Federals." The Russian reply to the propositions of England, France, and Austria, on the Polish question, had been received, but was not made public. It was believed to assent to the six points, but to propose an amnesty instead of an armistice. The Liverpool cotton market was firm. Breadstuffs and provisions were steady. Consols, 93@93¼.

GENERAL NEWS.

A dispatch from Frankfort, Ky., announces the death of Hon. JOHN J. CRITTENDEN, aged 77 years.

By the steamship Champion, which left Aspinwall on the 17th inst., and arrived at this port yesterday, was received $279,680 in treasure. The news by the arrival is of no importance.

The Stock market was firm on Saturday, and the demand large for the popular Loan of the United States by subscription at par. The market for Money was abundantly supplied at 5@6 ₩ cent. Gold advanced to 136¼@137, and Exchange to 139½ ₩ cent.

Flour was heavy and drooping on Saturday. Prime lots of Wheat were salable and buoyant. Corn was brisker and dearer. Cotton was in demand and was steady. A moderate business was transacted in Sugars, Fish and Provisions. Hay, Tobacco, Tallow and Whisky were freely purchased. Hops, Seeds and Wool were quiet. Freights were dull and heavy, with 618 vessels of all classes in port.

The Real Danger.

The factionists of the day have clamored loudly about the encroachments of the Government upon personal liberty, and the fearful peril of military despotism. They have systematically met every vigorous step of the Government in its own self-defence by this hue and cry. They have never tired of bawling, "The liberties of the people are in danger! the liberties of the people are in danger!" It was in this manner that the passions of the ignorant were gradually wrought up to the uncontrollable pitch that has just precipitated itself in flame and blood.

It is but too true that the liberties of the people are in danger. It is a fearful fact, and one that should be better understood in this great crisis of national destiny. But that danger is not, as the demagogues would have it, from usurpation, but from lawlessness. It is not from assumption of authority at Washington, but from the spirit of license, which alike generated the Southern rebellion and the New-York "insurrection."

It cannot be too clearly understood that what is really most endangered by this rebellion is not the Union, but constitutional liberty. Of the two, it is the latter that is the most insecure. All history proves that whatever else a nation may be tenacious of, it is most tenacious of its own existence. The first necessity, we may say indeed the first law, of a nation is self-preservation; and unless all human experience is a lie, liberty itself will be sacrificed sooner than national life. It is true enough that an individual may sacrifice life to liberty; but there is no suicide or immolation for a people—it must live. The condition of life, be it what it may, is in effect always a secondary matter. Least of all can a mighty nation like ours give up its integrity, and dissolve its greatness; and if it were possible nothing conceivable could compensate for the sacrifice, because even to the individual the smallest interest with security is always preferable to the largest interest without it. The smallest good which a man may call his own under a stable despotism will be preferred to the largest privilege under the reign of chaos, uncertainty and terror, secession and anarchy. Every man naturally prefers self-government to any other government, and will cling to it when once attained so long as it proves adequate to protect him. Nothing but this failure of power in popular institutions for the protection of public interests and the maintenance of national integrity ever could have caused, or ever will cause, any people to relinquish them.

The centralization of despotic power which our demagogues pretend to fear, has never been evolved from the vigor and centrality of Democratic power, but only after its decay. Bad as a crude Democracy, without constitution or representation, may have been in delegating monstrous powers to an elective despot, it was never guilty of alienating its sovereignty, but made the master of all the greater slave to itself. Monarchy has never supplanted Democracy, until Democracy was dead of disunion and discord, and its decomposing carcass, Anarchy, called for any strong hand to cast it out from the habitation of man. Society will endure any Government sooner than no Government. Here alone lies the danger. The liberties of the American people are impregnable so long as the Government of the American people is solid and sufficient—but not worth an hour's purchase after it has failed, or dissolved into its original elements.

Hence, if Liberty fail to save the nation she will fail to save herself. If disunion shall triumph over this present Government, then a Government that can triumph over disunion will inevitably take its place. Right or wrong, of necessity the nation will at all events ultimately secure its life, whatever interests may perish. However much we may theorize against it, yet the stern fact stands that personal rights have always had to succumb to public necessity. It never will be otherwise, so long as the whole remains greater than any of its parts. There is, therefore, no practical way to save personal liberty, but to uphold first the national integrity that gives it worth and security.

Equally true is it that it is not possible to destroy Republican liberty without first destroying Republican government. History—the sad history of Republics—gives no important instance of civil liberty crushed by bare usurpation. Absolutely the only road to despotism ever discovered by a free people has been through disloyalty, disintegration.

The Military Policy of the Rebels.

Fortune and the month of July have been so decidedly adverse to the rebel armies both in the East and in the West, and their prospects for the future look so beclouded and hopeless, that people generally have come to the conclusion that their game is already utterly lost, and that all that now remains for us to do is to march to an easy, speedy and final victory. It is a very agreeable anticipation, but we have no idea it will be realized as easily or rapidly as is supposed.

When heretofore the rebels have been in a strait in any section of the Confederacy—when any of their positions have been menaced, or any of their armies confronted by a force which they had reason to fear—they have adopted a very simple policy—the policy of concentration of forces. They have not scrupled to strip bare of troops very important positions—to give up large sections of territory, and to withdraw an army and its General altogether from their ground, and subordinate them to another commander, in order that they might magnify one or other of the main columns by which, for the time being, the Confederacy was upheld, or hold a vital point the loss of which would be disastrous. Thus all, or nearly all, the troops west of the Mississippi were joined to BRAGG'S and JOHNSTON'S armies; thus Nashville, and Memphis at one period, and Tullahoma at another, were evacuated; thus Richmond has been nearly denuded of troops for the last three months; and many other examples of the same kind might be offered.

A further and closer application of the same principle will undoubtedly be the policy adopted by the rebels, in their present desperate situation; and they may hope by this means, and at some auspicious moment and some vital point, to achieve advantages which will in some measure retrieve their late ill-fortune, and give the rebellion another brief lease of existence.

The rebels are still credited with three armies—that of LEE, that of BRAGG, and that of JOHNSTON. The first has been badly shattered, and the other two have undergone a succession of disasters which have brought them to such a condition that they do not even pretend to make a stand when our Generals advance upon them. JOHNSTON had every motive and every stimulus to hold the capital of Mississippi if it was in his power to do so, but he was only too glad, under cover of night, to hobble out of it and away no one knows where. BRAGG had equally strong inducements to hold Tullahoma, but on hearing the first bugle note of ROSECRANS' advance, he skedaddled off to the fastnesses of the mountains. It need not be supposed, however, that these two armies have not each of them a respectable, indeed a large, number of men. We do not doubt that JOHNSTON'S force is twenty-five thousand strong, and BRAGG'S somewhere near forty-thousand. The army of Gen. LEE, however, still formidable in numbers, is the real mainstay of the rebellion—the power without which the Confederacy could not stand a month, if a moment. In the last great struggles of JEFF. DAVIS, he will sacrifice everything else to sustain and save this army. Beside the levies that he will raise by his new universal conscription, we do not doubt that he will withdraw all troops possible from the Cotton States, and from every position he holds from Richmond to Mobile.

By giving up the Capital, Gen. JOHNSTON may be said to have given up the State of Mississippi. There is no point west of Mobile and the line of the Tombigbee River where he can make a stand. Even Mobile, after his late experience, he must know to be untenable, and at all events it can be defended as well by a garrison of ten thousand, as by one of five times that strength. In like manner, in abandoning Tullahoma, Gen. BRAGG has abandoned finally all the region north of the Tennessee River. Chattanooga, fixed in the fastnesses of the mountains, unlike Mobile planted on the plain, is a position that can be defended for an indefinite period by a small force of troops.

We think it likely, therefore, that the latter Southwestern position, which is an essential one, will be held by what is considered a sufficient defensive force; that garrisons will be left by JOHNSTON at Mobile and Montgomery, and that the bulk of the forces with BRAGG and JOHNSTON will be transferred from the Southwest to magnify the forces of Gen. LEE. In this way, the main rebel army would at once be brought up to the highest strength it has ever reached, and another invasion of the North, and even the capture of Washington, might appear as things within LEE'S power to undertake. The only chance the rebels now have of retaining power anywhere, is by concentrating the whole of their military force, or nearly the whole, at one point; and a short time will show whether this will not be the policy that they will adopt.

The Siege of Charleston.

The tidings from Charleston, whatever its real purport be—whether the assailants of Fort Wagner have met with a repulse as decided as the braggart bulletins of BEAUREGARD claim, or a mere partial check—will not surprise anyone who has formed an adequate conception of the defences of that city. The reduction of that stronghold is precisely the most difficult special bit of work in the whole field of military operations. The best engineers in the rebel service have not labored in vain for two years to make it as nearly impregnable as possible. LEE, JOHNSTON, BEAUREGARD and RIPLEY have in succession exhausted all the resources of their art to put out of reach of successful assault a city which both an intense local pride, and its great value as a port of entry for blockade-runners, prompt the rebels to hold at all hazard. We should, therefore, expect just such stops and checks.

But what is encouraging in the matter is, that the military and naval chiefs to whom is committed the new attempt to reduce Charleston have gone to work in the right fashion. Previously to the attack last April, it was a matter of eager discussion with those who were about to participate as to the best method of procedure—whether to attack first the sand batteries which flank the entrance to the harbor or to assail Sumter itself. In favor of the former plan it was urged that it would make sure clean work as we went on—that having effected a landing on Morris Island and driven the garrisons out of Fort Wagner and the works on Cumming's Point, we should have a point d'appui for siege batteries wherewith to operate against Sumter; this, in turn, would command the opposite and upper forts, and so on, seriatim. On the other hand, it was argued that the defensive capacities of sand-batteries against the slow shelling of Monitors are very great, as the experiment at Fort McAlister in the Ogeechee River a short time previously had proved; that a bombardment bringing only the like fruitless results would be very discouraging—whereas by making a vigorous drive direct at Sumter itself, and "knocking it into a brick pile," the moral effect of the reduction of the citadel would be very great, and necessitate the fall of all the outer works. The latter plan carried the day; and all the more so, as just previous to the attack Admiral DUPONT was informed by Gen. HUNTER that he could render him no coperation in the assault—that the military force must confine itself to garnering what the navy might reap, that is, to holding the works which the navy might take. It only remained, therefore, to make the attack with the fleet, while the military remained spectators from a safe coign of vantage.

The result is fresh in the recollection of the public. The iron-clads proceeded to the assault. Passing up the main ship channel without a shot from the batteries on Morris Island, the fleet entered the inferno of fire, designing to pass up to the inner and weaker face of Sumter. But the defenders had made special provision against this design, by obstructive appliances which prevented the passage of the fleet, and there was naught for the assailants to do but to measure their metal against the forts. For five and thirty minutes the Monitors gave and took, exposed to the converging fire of a couple of hundred guns. At the end of that time five of the nine iron-clads signaled themselves in a condition out of the fight, and the combat ended here.

This experiment was one test of the iron-clads, and proved at least what they could not do. It rudely dissipated illusions persistently entertained both by the public and the Navy Department—illusions not shared by the commanders of the vessels themselves. It was perfectly evident, after this, that however valuable our mailed ships might be for other services, this was a task beyond their scope. No man who witnessed the combat, or intelligently studied its record, could have failed to be convinced that Charleston would never be taken by a purely naval attack. Nor was it less obvious that Charleston could be taken by bringing to bear the adequate means in the right way—that is, by a combined land and naval attack on a large scale and after the method of a siege.

This is what Gen. GILLMORE and Admiral DAHLGREN are now doing. The military force have secured a footing on Morris Island, and, under cover of the iron ships and wooden gun-boats are pursuing their work, with such varying fortune as ordinarily attends the like operations. Morris Island lies at the Southern entrance of the harbor, running down to Light-house Inlet, which separates it from Folly Island, and at its northern end bending inward to the harbor, and forming a curved extremity named Cumming's Point. On this tongue of land, directly opposite Sumter, are a couple of sand batteries, and about a mile to the southward, fronting the Main Ship Channel, is Fort Wagner. It is an extensive, well-constructed and powerful sand work, with traverses, bomb-proof magazine, etc., and designed for about a dozen heavy guns en barbette. The prime necessity is, of course, to get possession of this fortification. This once done, it will not be a difficult matter to reduce the smaller batteries on Cummings' Point, which in turn affords a base of operations against Fort Sumter. At the time of the first bombardment of the fort by the rebels it will be remembered that it was the siege batteries on Cummings' Point which did the really effective work. Unhappily circumstances have changed. The rebels will hardly imitate Major ANDERSON'S leniency in refusing to fire on the batteries in process of erection, and our troops on that exposed sand-beach will be made to feel the best that Sumter, with its powerful armament, can do to retard the work of siege approach. Still, the reduction of the fort is not beyond the hope of a vigorous assault with adequate force. It is true, the possession of Fort Sumter will be far from being the possession of Charleston. The approach to the city forms a cul de sac, four miles in length, heavily lined on both sides with batteries, and the channel-ways are obstructed in the most effective manner. But the reduction of Fort Sumter would be of itself sufficient to compensate for any sacrifices that might be made to secure it. Then and only then may we hope for a blockade really effective of this port. And for the rest, the possession of the city is a matter of minor importance."

The only question now is whether the heads of the expedition have a force adequate to the business in hand. It is a simple mathematical problem. A certain work is to be accomplished: it remains to establish an equation between the means and the end. It is an old maxim that any place may be reduced in forty days and forty nights—the meaning of which, in its essential spirit, is that time and sufficient force must in the end compel capitulation. What forces the rebels may have for the defence of Charleston we are not informed. It is known that, on the occasion of the last assault, they numbered not less than fifty-five thousand. Doubtless a great portion of this force was subsequently withdrawn to more active fields; but we may depend on it that the rebels will not surrender Charleston if heavy reinforcements can save it. We cannot rid ourselves of the unpleasant suspicion that Gen. GILLMORE has an inadequate force for so momentous an undertaking. Let the authorities see to this. The Government is, we are assured, very earnest in its desires to bring about a successful issue of the struggle. It need not be added that the best proof of this will be the prompt shipment of big batteries and heavy battalions.

The Capture of John Morgan.

A daintier bit of dessert after the glorious repast of Union victories which loyal souls have lately enjoyed could hardly have been devised than that announced to-day—the capture of JOHN MORGAN. It is precisely what was wanting to fill up the measure of perfect satisfaction. The whole affair has something of the piquant interest of a comedy, with the dramatic requirements all fulfilled. He came—he saw—and he was caught!

MORGAN has long enjoyed the reputation of being the prince of all the rebel raiders—the chief of those free riders that gave such éclat to the early cavalry operations of the rebels. None of this class have operated on so grand a theatre, with such unparalleled audacity and with such unbounded success, as the free-handed Kentuckian. There has also been a poetry and a romance of its kind attending his exploits that belong to those of none of his compeers. The immense line of communications which our army in Tennessee presents, the numerous depots, outposts and garrisons, and the long-exposed flanks of railroads have been the rich booty on which he has long preyed. Gen. ROSECRANS could never post a letter in Murfreesboro, and feel sure that it would not fall into the hands of MORGAN rather than the person to whom it was addressed. Not a passenger could enter the train to run from Nashville to Louisville without nervous anticipations that some of MORGAN'S band might, before it reached its destination, stop it, to demand his money or his life. In all this class of operations his services to the rebel cause have been immense.

In regard to the last of MORGAN'S raids it is difficult to give any satisfactory explanation of its motive. His invasion of Kentucky last year had a definite object in connection with BRAGG'S advance. But this time it was neither the forerunner nor accompaniment of any such movement. It is possible, however, that he had hoped to give the idea that it was of the same nature, and thus call off a portion of ROSECRANS' force from the pursuit of BRAGG. Never was attempt more completely unsuccessful. Not a man was moved from Tennessee to follow him. On the whole, this raid was a faux pas; and, ever since MORGAN entered Indiana and Ohio, he has been moving, not with any direct offensive object, but with the simple purpose of getting away.

It is, perhaps, fair to confess that our satisfaction at the capture is not lessened by the fact that we had not complete faith it would be brought about. The assurances of his prospective bagging brought by telegraph bore too stereotyped an air to inspire confidence. But he is caught, and very great credit is certainly due the enterprising captor. It is not less gratifying that while the leader is nabbed, the greater part of his command has also been taken. MORGAN, in his advance, swam the Cumberland River with fifty-one hundred men. At least four thousand are to-day prisoners—the rest, after scattering, are skulking through the woods for their homes. The very head and front of all the rebel cavalry offending in the West is now clean cut off.

THE REBEL ARMY IN STRAITS FOR SUPPLIES.—Gen. LEE has been struggling very hard for the last fortnight to get off the plunder, in the shape of grain and other supplies, which he found in Pennsylvania, and to add to these the corn and cattle of the Shenandoah Valley. It was highly necessary that he should effect this if possible, as the area from which the Confederate army draws its supplies is now rather limited. Not only are they cut off from the vast stores of grain and cattle west of the Mississippi; not only is JOHNSTON'S army cut off from the rich harvests of the Yazoo Valley and Northern Mississippi; not only is BRAGG'S army deprived of the immense crops which had been grown for him in Southern Tennessee; but LEE'S army cannot get supplies at present from anywhere outside of the State of Virginia. An expedition from our army has cut the East Tennessee and Virginia Railroad at Wytheville (Va.,) and another expedition has cut the Weldon and Wilmington Road near Tarboro (N. C.) By the former line were brought to Virginia all the hogs, cattle and corn from East Tennessee, and by the latter line provisions were brought up from North Carolina. The only connecting road with the South which Richmond now has, is the line running to Raleigh, and if we may credit the rebel papers, the capacity of that road is exceedingly limited. These breaches of their roads bear very hard upon the rebels, as they cannot repair them soon for want of railroad iron and other materials. It will be remembered that when Col. CARTER cut the East Tennessee and Virginia Road last November, it took them four months to repair the damage he had done.

In view of these facts, it is vitally necessary for LEE to gather up and carry with him every ear of corn and every ounce of flesh he can lay hands upon. He could better afford to risk, and even lose, another battle, than fail in this. The amount of provisions required for his army is enormous, and he never had so narrow a field to find them in as at the present moment.

A WESTERN SOLDIER.—Mr. RUSSELL, of the London Times, in one of his letters from the Northwest, which he has published in his "Diary," gives a lively account of one Mr. OGLESBY whom he met in Illinois, who had raised a regiment of volunteers, and who struck the Englishman by "his shrewdness, simple honesty and zeal." Mr. OGLESBY told RUSSELL that "he had begun life in utmost obscurity, but that somehow or other he got into a lawyer's office, and there by hard drudgery, by mother wit and industry, notwithstanding a defective education, he had raised himself, not only to independence, but to such a position that a thousand men had gathered at his call, and selected one who had never led a company in his life to be their Colonel." He is further described as being an excellent orator of the Western school, who made good homely, telling speeches to his men. "I'm not as good as your Frenchmen of the schools of Paris," said he, "nor am I equal to the Russian Colonels I met at St. Petersburgh, who sketched me out how they had beaten you Britishers at Sebastopol; but I know I can do good straight fighting with my boys when I get a chance. There is a good deal in training, to be sure, but nature tells too."

Well, Mr. OGLESBY, or Col. OGLESBY, did not have to wait long for a chance of doing "good straight fighting" with his boys. And he did it too, and in a style both natural and scientific. From Fort Donelson and Shiloh, through all the Tennessee campaign of Gen. GRANT, and subsequently under Gen. ROSECRANS, at Corinth, he led not only his own regiment, but a brigade, and subsequently a division, and rose from the rank of Colonel until he wore the double star of a Major-General, and from being the object of devotion of a thousand men, he became one of the most ardently loved and most enthusiastically admired, not to say successful leaders, in the gallant and ever victorious Army of the Tennessee. In another column will be found a touching farewell order of Maj.-Gen. OGLESBY to the command which he has led in person through the fire of so many battles. He has resigned his commission because he is incapacitated for further duty in consequence of a severe wound which he received at the battle of Corinth, in October last, and which since that time has confined him to his home in Illinois.

The loss of no soldier in our army could cause greater grief to his troops than will be caused by the loss of the services and presence of Gen. OGLESBY in GRANT'S army. It is a loss to the whole country, as well as to his own command. For though when Mr. RUSSELL met with Mr. OGLESBY thirty months ago, the latter had never led a company in his life, yet, before two short years were over, he had led the Second division of the Army of the Tennessee in a style which showed, to use his own words, that "nature tells too." The applauding language in which he bids farewell to his men is eminently applicable to his own services.

NEWS FROM WASHINGTON.

OUR SPECIAL WASHINGTON DISPATCHES.

WASHINGTON, Sunday, July 26.

CHARLESTON.

There is no later news from Charleston, as yet, than that contained in the rebel reports already forwarded, but the feeling about speedy success is not buoyant.

THE TWO GREAT ARMIES.

The situation of LEE'S and MEADE'S armies is still understood but vaguely here.

GEN. CONNER'S EXPEDITION IN UTAH.

Gen. CONNER has transmitted to the headquarters of the army an interesting account of his recent expedition. Among its results are useful lessons to the Indians of Utah, with a view to the preservation of peace; the establishment of a new military post at a point at or near the great bend of Bear River, known as Soda Springs, in the Territory of Idaho, for the protection of overland emigration to Oregon, California and the Bannock City Mines. A new road has been opened north of Soda Springs to Snake River, to shorten the route of emigrants from the East vid Fort Bridger, not less than seventy miles, and to present a route well watered, and furnishing good feed for animals, with abundance of game. Gen. CONNER also laid out a town, in which he settled fifty-three families, of one hundred and sixty souls, comprising the seceding Mormons, known as "Morrisites," and who fled from BRIGHAM YOUNG'S persecution.

THE CROPS.

The Commissioner of Agriculture has issued his statement of the condition of the crops last month throughout the United States. The condition of wheat was very nearly, but not quite, up to the average, and a larger breadth of land was sown than ever before. Corn is also slightly below the average.

TENNESSEE.

Data recently arranged at the War Department show how largely Tennessee has contributed to her own, now almost perfect, deliverance. She already has twenty regiments of infantry and cavalry, and two batteries in the service, most of which were made up from refugees, and organized beyond her borders.

A COURT OF INQUIRY.

Gen. HEINTZELMAN has called a Court of Inquiry to investigate the conduct of certain officers of Gen. STONEMAN'S command during the progress of the great raid in the rear of LEE'S army. The Court is composed of Gen. MAX WEBER, President, Cols. DAVIS and WARNER.

DEPARTMENT OF THE GULF.

Past and Present Aspect of New-Orleans—Gen. Banks' Campaign—The Nine Months' Men—Opening of the Mississippi River—Mobilian Veracity—News up the River—Health of the City.

From Our Own Correspondent.

NEW-ORLEANS, La., Saturday, July 18, 1863.

PAST AND PRESENT ASPECT OF NEW-ORLEANS.

This city is suddenly galvanized into new life by the presence of a large body of officers who I had noticed, for weeks past, plunged up to their necks in warlike duties before Port Hudson. The new military order issued by Gen. EMORY, compelling all officers to carry their side arms in the streets, gives the place a very martial appearance, and the clanking of spurs and sabres, which greets one at every turn, produces quite an impressive music.

The contrast presented by the state of things in the city to-day, and that of only a few days ago, must appear strange indeed to those who remained in New-Orleans during the period when matters looked darkest for the cause of the Union in this Department. It went far beyond anything I had ever imagined. With the enemy in possession of Brashear City, and overrunning the whole Lafourche district, up to Algiers itself—with the telegraph destroyed between this place and Port Hudson—and rumors constantly arriving of the enemy pressing in large numbers upon the rear of our besieging forces, you can imagine how elated the rebel sympathizers must have been here, and how correspondingly depressed those of the Unionists who were afflicted with weak knees. So far had rebel assumption gone that already a new "reign of terror" was beginning to be inaugurated; and a peaceful Union citizen told me, this morning, that as late as the 4th of July he was actually threatened, by some ruffians, with hanging, in the neighborhood of his own house.

Gen. EMORY was, however, quite equal to the emergency. Like magic he organized a home guard, both white and black, who, with the aid of the Unionists here, (stronger in their secret organizations than their enemies imagine,) would have been more than enough to protect the city from any unhallowed hands. But now all is changed. The fall of Vicksburgh and Port Hudson, to say nothing of LEE's discomfiture, have come upon the community like a clap of thunder in a clear sky. Loyalty walks abroad with head erect and heart beating with fervent joy, while Treason skulks about in by-ways like a whipped cur.

is here reposing for a few days upon his laurels, and dearly has he earned them. When a comprehensive history of this campaign comes to be written, and a fair estimate is made of what the General had to accomplish and the means placed at his disposal for doing it, it will be found that no commander has produced such grand results from such thoroughly inadequate materials since the war began.

1st. He was further off than any other from all supplies and reinforcements. 2d. His army, numerically, was quite insufficient—for you must not be deluded into the idea that every regiment leaving New-York with flying colors and full complement of shoulder straps is a regiment—and then composed of perfectly green troops—nine months' men, who, by the time they got drilled into soldiers, were already counting the hours that were to send them home again. 3d. To his military duties were superadded the stupendous labors of civil reorganization, in a place with more rabid contending elements than perhaps any other yet recovered to the national arms, and where hatred to the North literally amounted to insanity. 4th. With these inadequate means he had to do what? To reclaim the whole State of Louisiana back to the Union—to drive the rebels out of a vast track of almost impassable bayous—to seize the strongest fortress but one yet in possession of the enemy—thereby letting loose the imprisoned commerce of the whole Mississippi Valley, cutting the Confederacy in twain, and dealing a more vital blow to the rebellion than would be the fall of Richmond itself.

It is not to be wondered at if, in view of what was to be done, and the wherewith to do it, many of Gen. BANKS' military advisers, when he thought matters ripe for execution, were inclined to dissuade him from the attempt until reinforcements arrived. But I have reason to know that it was so. With that self-reliance and determination of purpose which can only be evolved in great emergencies, and with a full reliance upon the devotion of his troops, the General went to work in earnest; with what success is already matter of history.

I have been told—I know not how correctly—that the whole campaign in the Attakapas country has been spoken of in very high quarters as an eccentric movement. "Eccentric" forsooth! Is there any eccentricity in a Commander sweeping his enemy before him, and seeing that he has no force in his rear, before sitting down to invest a stronghold like Port Hudson? Again, people ask: What have we gained by this march into the Attakapas region? and why did we not hold the country as we went along?

To the first question I have four good answers: First, we gained enough treasure in cotton, cattle, and invaluable black labor, to nearly if not quite cover the expense of the campaign. Second, we seized the mouth of the Red River and cut off the supplies from Port Hudson by water, making its reduction a matter of certainty. Third, we not only demoralized the army but the whole people—so thoroughly inoculating them with freedom, that they are forever safe from any relapse to Slavery. Fourth, we killed the prestige of the rebel army in that region, and found that they are no match whatever for our men in a fair and open field. For an answer to the second question, people must go to those who absurdly sent a Commanding General here with no troops to hold the places that he conquered, unless, in doing so, he would forego the main object of his mission—the reduction of Port Hudson. They, and not he, are responsible for our soldiers having now to go over again, the very ground they have recently taken at such cost. It is to be noped the authorities at Washington will take advantage of the lesson and see that Gen. BANKS has henceforth men enough to hold what he wins, and that right speedily.

THE NINE MONTHS' MEN.

It has been the custom among a portion of the army and civilians, also, to decry the nine months' men. There are two sides to every question, and this one forms no exception. These men came out here under a distinct stipulation with the Government that they were to serve for a certain them—nine months—and that at the end of that time they were to return home. A compact between a Government and the people is as sacred and binding as between individuals.

At the time that the stipulated pe[illegible]ds is about to expire these regiments find themse[illegible]ocated before Port Hudson, in the midst of a siege [illegible] duration of which none could then foretell. It can easily be understood what a complication [illegible] circumstances would thereby arise. For thes[illegible]en to take up their traps and go home would be to leave Gen. BANKS without soldiers to carry on the siege; on the other hand, for him to insist, by main force, upon their remaining, would be in contravention of a sacred understanding between them and their Government.

Considering the position in which they were placed, and the rights to which they were entitled, I am bound to confess that I consider the nine months' men behaved extremely well, under the circumstances. I believe, further, that they would have submitted more gracefully to the extra demands made upon their services had their position been more clearly acknowledged by the Commanding General, and their services been called for more palpably in the shape of a request and an appeal to their pride and patriotism, than as a demand. I know it was the wish of the Commanding General to make the imperative necessities of his position as little distasteful to his soldiers as possible; but, at the same time, I was behind the scenes enough to know that a little patting on the back would have made things go more easily.

Upon the whole, the nine months' men have done well—infinitely better than we had a right to expect of them. There are men among them as brave and zealous as are to be found in any other portion of the army. Indeed, nothing speaks so strongly for the individual character which goes to form the rank and file of our armies, as to see what soldiers can be made out of these same nine months' men.

At the same time the whole system is monstrously absurd, and should be instantly abandoned. Before a man has a fair chance of becoming a soldier, his time is expired for him to go home; and months before that time arrives—indeed, from the very day of his enlistment—he is counting the hours for his release. If, fortunately for our cause, the men were not individually made of good stuff, it would be utterly impossible to get any fighting material out of so wretched and ridiculous a system. No man is really of any proper availability as a soldier, who is not prepared to take up arms for a term of at least three years.

OPENING OF THE MISSISSIPPI RIVER.

The whole town was thrown into a state of pleasing excitement on Thursday last, just after the Creole sailed, by the sudden appearance at the levee of the large steamboat Imperial, just in from St. Louis. She came down freighted with some 600 head of cattle, part of a large haul that was made at Natchez a short time ago. She had a pleasant, unmolested trip all the way down, and reported the river perfectly quiet between this and St. Louis.

The Imperial is an immense, showy vessel—one of the first-class river steamers, which completely dwarfs the Laurel Hill, Empire Parish, and others that we have been long accustomed to look upon as leviathans. But it was not her size nor fine equipments which impressed the eager multitudes who thronged to see her; it was the fact that she was the first freight-boat which had ventured down the Mississippi since the fall of Vicksburgh and Port Hudson, and every one who gazed upon her proud form saw in her the embodiment of reawakened commerce with the Mississippi Valley. She staid in New-Orleans just long enough to receive the greetings of hundreds, and then went on to Carrollton, where she unloaded her living freight.

The speedy arrival of this vessel here—so immediately following the capture of the rebel stronghold—tells a significant story of the downfall of the rebellion, as would the destruction of a rebel army. Let commerce once resume her accustomed channels, and all the eloquence of Belial himself will not persuade the people of the South to continue the horrid pastime of cutting their brothers' throats—for what? That JEFF. DAVIS and his handful of wily oligarchs shall retain power to count their heads of human cattle, and build up this continent a temple of despotism on the ruins of human liberty.

MOBILIAN VERACITY.

While enjoying the pleasure of dining with Gen. BANKS, yesterday, a Mobile paper was produced—the Daily Tribune of the 8th—which caused no little amusement. Among other interesting items, we found the following astounding editorial paragraph:

FROM NEW-ORLEANS.

We learn that two citizens arrived here from New-Orleans yesterday afternoon. They left that city last Saturday evening at 5 o'clock, and report confidentially that the city was then in the possession of the Confederate troops, under Gen. MAGRUDER, and that they saw the Confederate flag flying from the St. Charles Hotel. They also state that the loyal (!) citizens had, in many instances, retaken possession of their residences; that the whole city was in great commotion, and that when they were leaving, Gen. MAGRUDER and a portion of his army were marching down for the purpose of taking the forts.

Further on we have:

GLORIOUS NEWS.

VICKSBURGH SAFE.

Gen. Dick Taylor Whips Banks.

HE IS HASTENING TO ASSIST GEN. JOHNSTON.

JACKSON, July 7.—No official account of the fall yet received. I think the "bung" stung many yesterday. A courier arrived from the front last night; knows nothing about it. He also heard heavy firing at Vicksburgh last night.

Information has been received that DICK TAYLOR had whipped BANKS, and is now on his way to assist JOHNSTON. A.

PRIVATE DISPATCH.

JACKSON, July 7.—Vicksburgh is safe.

F. S. BLOUNT.

You can imagine the comic effect produced by the perusal of these facts; increased no little by the General's singular unconsciousness of the whipping he had just had from Mr. DICK TAYLOR. Seriously, though, the good people of Mobile must be in a poor way, when their courage is to be bolstered up by such shameless and egregious lies.

UP THE RIVER.

Nothing new has transpired within the last day or two up the river. GROVER and WHITTEL are keeping a sharp eye on the rebels; and if our gunboats only get round to Brashear City in time, it is to be hoped they will be effectually stopped while our land forces advance and bag them. If not, and they should be allowed to escape across the bay with their command, we shall just have the same old game reënacted again.

THE HEALTH OF THE CITY

continues marvelously good, and I have yet to hear of the very first whisper of anything like an epidemic, although we are past the middle of July. Our armies have, indeed, been truly blessed ever since we came here.

The city is becoming gradually deserted, and if the present exodus continues, I shall soon find myself "the last rose of Summer." New-Orleans must, however, long continue a place of exceeding interest. Not only have we to watch the enemy's movements in the Lafourche District, but then there is the revival of trade by the opening of the Mississippi—then Mobile must very soon be on the tapis,—and who knows what direct bearing the doings of "his uncle's nephew" in Mexico may have upon the fate of Louisiana? NEMO.

The Paroling at Vicksburgh.

If you have met with the exact process or words of paroling the captured troops at Vicksburgh, I would beg you to give them to your readers. How is such a number of non-commissioned officers and privates paroled? Do they take an oath not to serve during this war unless exchanged? And what hold does the captor retain on so large a number of men, who, it would seem, can hardly ever be identified again.

When, in former wars, a large body of troops surrendered on conditions not to fight again, the officers and the Government of the captured soldiers became answerable for the men. The latter remained soldiers in the rank, but were disabled from fighting. Do the surrendered troops of our enemy remain organized in rank and file, or does the enemy disband them? Is it distinctly impressed upon all, that death is the universal penalty for breaking the parole?

I doubt not but that many of your readers would wish to be clearly informed on this subject.

Paroling, you are doubtless aware, has in no previous war been carried to such an extent as in our present civil conflict. JUS.

REPLY.

In the full account of the surrender of Vicksburgh, published in the TIMES of the 17th instant, and furnished by our own correspondent, the form of words used in paroling the prisoners captured at Vicksburgh was given. At the date of that letter (4th July) only the General and Staff officers had been paroled, but we understand that the same form of parole was used in the case of all other captured officers and privates. We repeat the parole used on the occasion:

VICK[illegible]BURGH, Miss., July 4, A. D. 1863.

To all whom it may concern, know ye that I, ——, a ——, Company —, Volunteers C. S. A., being a prisoner of war in the hands of the United States forces, in virtue of the capitulation of the City of Vicksburgh and its garrison by Lieut.-Gen. JOHN C. PEMBERTON, commanding, on the 4th day of July, 1863, do, in pursuance of the terms of said capitulation, give this, my solemn parole, under oath, that I will not take up arms again against the United States, nor serve in any military, police or constabulary force, in any fort, garrison or field works held by the Confederate States of America, against the United States of America, nor as guard of prisoners, depots or stores, nor discharge any duties usually performed by soldiers against the United States of America, until duly exchanged by the proper authorities.

Name of officer signing.

Given before me this — day of ——, 1863.

——— and Paroling Officer.

We thus comply with our correspondent's request, and at the same time answer his first two questions. As to his other queries—what hold we retain on these paroled men, whether they remain organized, and whether they comprehend the penalty of violating their parole—we can only say that the men were all carefully registered, and we suppose, of course, understood the penalty of violating parole; and in regard to their remaining organized, as regiments, &c., the practical fact is, as all the Vicksburgh correspondents and Gen. GRANT himself assert, that the garrison almost entirely broke up and disbanded after the fall of Vicksburgh. Gen. GRANT's words were: "The army paroled here have, to a great extent, deserted, and are scattered over the country in every direction." These statements, of course, do not furnish a legal justification of the course adopted on the occasion.

It is possible that there may have been technical errors in the mode adopted by Gen. GRANT in paroling the 40,000 men which it is now proved he captured at Vicksburgh; but on the whole, and practically considered, it is generally conceded that he adopted the wisest course. The whole subject of parole, as it should be universally carried out, and as we hope it will hereafter be practiced by all our officers, is lucidly and concisely set forth in War Department General Order No. 100, otherwise entitled "Instructions for the Government of Armies of the United States in the Field," prepared by Dr. FRANCIS LIEBER. In such captures as that of Gen. GRANT, the adoption of a proper course, and conformity to the established law, is a matter of vital importance.

Amusements.

Now that order is restored in Warsaw, the business at the two theatres that remain open on Broadway has revived to a prosperous and remunerative standard. No alteration has taken place in the bills, and none is either necessary or contemplated. At Niblo's Garden the "Duke's Motto" is still the all-sufficient attraction, whilst at the Winter Garden Mr. FRANK WOOD's very spirited and laughable extravaganza of "Leah the Forsook" keeps the town in merriment and good humor. Both these pieces will suffice for the Summer season, which has but another month to run. At Barnum's Museum the dramatic season has come to a close, but the miscellaneous entertainments are still of a most varied and attractive character. An hour in any part of the day or eve ning can always be pleasantly spent at this establishment.

ANOTHER SPEECH BY ALEX. H. STEPHENS.

He Finds Nothing Discouraging in the Present Condition of Affairs.

From the Richmond Dispatch, July 23.

Vice-President STEPHENS, who is on his way to the South, stopped at Charlotte, N. C., on Friday night, and was serenaded by a large concourse of citizens. In reply he made them a speech about an hour in length. He commenced by alluding to the invasion of Maryland and Pennsylvania by Gen. LEE's army; said that it had whipped the enemy on their own soil and obtained vast supplies for our own men, and was now ready to again meet the enemy on a new field. Whatever might be the movements and objects of Gen. LEE, he had entire confidence in his ability to accomplish what he undertook, for in ability and intellect he was a head and shoulders above any man in the Yankee army. He commended Gen. LEE for keeping his own secrets, and told the people not to be discouraged because they did not hear from LEE over his own signature. He would come out all right in the end.

Mr. STEPHENS next spoke of the surrender of Vicksburgh, and said that it was not an occurrence to cause discouragement or gloom; that the loss of Vicksburgh was not as severe a blow as the loss of Fort Pillow, Island No. or New-Orleans. The Confederacy had survived the loss of these points, and would survive the loss of Vicksburgh, Port Hudson and other places. Suppose, said he, we were to lose Mobile, Charleston and Richmond, it would not affect the heart of the Confederacy. We could and would survive such losses, and finally secure our independence. He was not at all discouraged in the prospect; he never had the "blues" himself, and had no respect for sympathy for "croakers." The enemy has already appropriated twenty-seven hundred millions of dollars and one million of men for our subjugation, and after two years' war had utterly failed, and if the war continued for two years longer, they would fail to accomplish our subjugation. So far they had not broken the shell of the Confederacy. In the Revolutionary war the British at one time had possession of North Carolina, South Carolina, and other States; they took Philadelphia, and dispersed Congress, and for a long time held almost complete sway in the Colonies—yet they did not conquer our forefathers. In the war of 1812 the British captured the capital of the nation, Washington City, and burnt it, yet they did not conquer us; and if we are true to ourselves now, true to our birth-rights, the Yankee nation will utterly fail to subjugate us. Subjugation would be utter ruin and eternal death to Southern people and all that they hold most dear. He exhorted the people to give the Government a cordial support, to frown down all croakers and grumblers, and to remain united and fight to the bitter end for liberty and independence.

As for reconstruction, said Mr. STEPHENS, such a thing was impossible—such an idea must not be tolerated for instant. Reconstruction would not end the war, but would produce a more horrible war than that in which we are now engaged. The only terms on which we can obtain permanent peace is final and complete separation from the North. Rather than submit to anything short of that, let us all resolve to die like men worthy of freedom.

In regard to foreign intervention, Mr. STEPHENS advised his hearers to build no hopes on that yet awhile. He did not believe that the leading foreign powers ever intended that the North and South should be gain united—they preferred that the separation should be permanent—but they considered both sides too strong now, and did not deem it gooe policy on their part to interfere and put a stop to the war. Foreign nations see that the result of the war will be to establish a despotism at the North, and are therefore willing to allow it to continue a while longer.

The whole tone of Mr. STEPHENS' speech was very encouraging, and showed not the slightest sign of despondency. He concluded by expressing entire confidence in the ability of the Confederacy to maintain our cause and achieve independence.

The Thirteen Thousand Dollar Robbery.

HOW THE THIEVES WERE ARRESTED.

From the Rochester Union, July 24.

It was announced yesterday that Detective BEATTON had captured the thieves who stole $13,000 from Mr. RUTTER, the Memphis banker, in a car in the Central depot, on Tuesday night. It will be interesting to know how the thing was accomplished. Mr. BEATTON arrived here last evening with his prisoners, and has communicated some of the particulars as to how he made the arrest. He was in town when the robbery was committed, and went to the Central depot a few moments after the bag of money had been stolen. He "spotted" the men who were concerned in the affair, and told them that he knew all about the theft, and demanded admission to share the plunder. To this they assented to avoid arrest. Meanwhile the fellow who had the bag had disappeared, and his confederates knew not where he had gone. They became uneasy, and feared that he had cheated them. They wanted BEATTON to help them find him. Meanwhile the chap with the money had passed out of the depot and gone to the neighborhood of Washington-square, where he discovered a house building on South-street. He went into the back yard of this house, found a secluded place, cut open the leather sack and removed the contents, putting the gold and bills into his pockets as best he could. This done he threw the bag away, and started on foot for Fairport. The next morning he took a train for the East.

BEATTON stayed here all night, keeping the head man of the gang with him, and telling the others to be on hand the next morning, when the whole party went eastward together. At Utica they found the man with the money, awaiting the arrival of his companions. The money was in a trunk, checked for New-York. All got on board the train for Albany, and going down, BEATTON was recognized as "one of them," and gathered such information as he required. Just as the train reached Albany, BEATTON threw off his disguise, and informed the fellow who had stolen the money that he was a prisoner. He put him in irons, took the check from him, secured the trunk containing the money, and locked up the prisoner. Meanwhile, some Albany policemen arrested two others of the party, and locked them up. The fellow who took the money is a German, and calls himself FRANCIS HYMAN. On his arrival here last night, he went with Mr. BEATTON to South-street, and pointed out the place where the satchel of Mr. RUTTER was left, after he had cut it open and taken out the contents. It was found just where the rogue had left it.

The other fellows brought up by BEATTON are known as WM. WOLF and JOHN BENSON.

A brief examination of these parties was had to-day. HYMAN was held to answer, and the other fellows were discharged.

It was understood that only a part of the money had been recovered. Upon a careful examination this morning it was found to be all saved except fifteen or twenty dollars.

MARTIN'S LIFE CORDIAL.
THE GREAT AMERICAN REMEDY FOR CHOLERA, CHOLERA MORBUS, CHOLERA INFANTUM, DYSENTERY, DIARRHŒA, SUMMER COMPLAINT, PAIN AND CRAMP IN THE STOMACH, SOUR STOMACH AND HEARTBURN.
It relieves those disagreeable symptoms of DYSPEPSIA, NAUSEA, and RISING of FOOD after eating, and as a SOOTHING SYRUP for CHILDREN, it has no equal. It regulates the bowels, allays pain, and under its very SOOTHING effects the child gently drops into a quiet slumber, and awakes refreshed and invigorated. It is very pleasant to the taste, and children, instead of refusing to take it, cry for the medicine after once tasting it. Call for circulars and read certificates from such men as Prof. N. P. Hill, of Brown University; Rev. Horace James, of Worcester, Mass., now Chaplain of the Twenty-fifth Massachusetts, and Superintendent of Blacks, Newbern, N. C., officers in the army, and others.
N. B.—This article is warranted, even in the most obstinate cases, and Agents are particularly requested to pay back the money where satisfactory evidence is given that the medicine has proved ineffectual.

DEAFNESS
NOISES IN THE HEAD,
Diseases of the Eye, Ear & Throat,
CATARRH CURED
BY
DR. VON EISENBERG.
Author of "Surgical and Practical Observations on the Diseases of the Ear, with his new Mode of Treatment."
No. 816 Broadway, near 11th-st.

NEW TESTIMONY.

"NEW-YORK, May 6.
I was entirely deaf in my left ear, accompanied by a discharge. I placed myself under Dr. VON EISENBERG's care, who, by his great skill, restored me to perfect hearing, in the short space of a few minutes, without giving me the slightest pain, and the discharge has ceased entirely. The Eustachian Tube, which was obliterated, is quite open, and I feel that the air-passage performs its functions. I am amply satisfied, and recommend every one suffering from impaired hearing to place themselves under the treatment of this eminent and successful physician.
THOMAS GRANAN, No. 539 6th-av."

"NEW-YORK, May 7, 1863.
I have great pleasure to testify to the skill of Dr. VON EISENBERG. I went into his office almost completely deaf, and came out with my perfect hearing. It is nearly twelve months since, and the hearing is perfect. The operation, which lasted two or three minutes in each of my ears, gave me no pain whatsoever. I, with confidence, recommend all sufferers to place themselves under Dr VON EISENBERG's unsurpassing skill.
SAMUEL C. HUNT,
No. 6 Meserole-av., Greenpoint, L. I."

No. 136 MADISON-ST., NEW-YORK, Feb. 9, 1863.
I have been completely deaf in one ear, and partially so in the other, for above seventeen years, with a disagreeable discharge from both ears, combined with continual rumbling noise in the head, for which I have been treated by a most eminent practitioner in the City without the slightest relief.
I consulted Dr. Von Eisenberg, but I must candidly say that I had no faith in his success when I did so. It is, therefore, due to Dr. Von Eisenberg to acknowledge that I am entirely cured; also, that he displayed that skill and knowledge which have procured for him such an unrivaled reputation. As I have had an opportunity of comparing his mode of treatment with that of others, I can truly state that it is not only superior, but the principles which direct his mode of restoring the hearing are, in my opinion, certain. JOHN TAYLOR.

NEW-YORK, July 19, 1863.
This certifies that my mother has been for some time afflicted with partial deafness, suffering from pain, and rumbling noises in the head, together with other indications of a total loss of hearing. Dr. Von Eisenberg removed from her ears a great quantity of matter, together with coagulated blood, relieving her instantaneously, and all without pain. It is with grateful thanks that I give this testimony to his skill.
CARROLL J. POST, No. 29 South-st.

SIGHT RESTORED.

JUNE 25, 1863.
My daughter brought me to Dr. VON EISENBERG almost completely blind in both eyes. I could not bear the pain nor the light. I am completely cured by Dr. VON EISENBERG, and called now to express my gratitude to the Doctor for his skill and unremitting attention, by which I recovered one of the most precious senses to me after being deprived of it for four years. It is only due to Dr. VON EISENBERG to state that I have tried several physicians in vain. I shall be happy to bear personal testimony to Dr. VON EISENBERG's unrivaled success to any lady or gentleman who will call on me.

CHRONIC CATARRH CURED.
READ
NEW-YORK, March 20, 1863.
"This is to certify, that I have suffered from very severe CHRONIC CATARRH, with a dull heaviness in the head. I felt my nose completely stopped up accompanied by continual soreness of the throat, the chills stealing over me with occasional hot flushes, a great tightness of the chest and pain, so much so, that every one thought it was consumption. Having heard of the great cures performed by Dr. Von Eisenberg, I consulted him with but little hope of a cure. I am now happy to be enabled to add my testimonial to the great number already in the Doctor's possession, as to his scientific and successful mode of treatment, as he has shown in my case that skill and knowledge which have procured for him so great a reputation. I am so entirely restored to perfect health that I do most sincerely recommend all sufferers from CHRONIC CATARRH and SORE THROAT to apply at once to Dr. Von Eisenberg with a certainty of being cured."

RADWAY ON THE DRAFT.
We have heard a large number of persons within the last fortnight complaining that they have caught cold, been sitting in a draft. The draft is what is the matter; of course it affects everybody, even the women. Some cough, others complain of pain in the limbs, again you will find a man who will say he is Bilious, and another with his head stuffed up. They all want clearing out. "Physically we mean," of course. Let them take a dose of Radway's Pills, those elegant gum-coated tasteless Pills. They give you no pain, cure your obstinate SUMMER COLD, invigorate your system, and enliven your intellect. Every General with his battle to fight, every Judge with a case to decide, every Lawyer with a client to defend, or Gold Speculator with his PILE to make, should take his dose of the regulating Pills.
Small doses regulate, large doses purge.

I.
WAR PICTURES FROM THE SOUTH.
By Col. B. ESTVAN, of the Confederate Army.
1 vol. 12mo, cloth. $1 25.
This work commends itself to the reader for its strict impartiality. The author deeply deplores the unhappy strife which now agitates the world, but yet looks forward to a glorious future.

"This book, by a Confederate officer, will be read with general interest. It is written by a German adopted citizen of this country, who served in the rebel army, and finally fled to England to escape the horrors which he could no longer endure."—Hartford Times.

"Nothing that the war has

—On Saturday night, June 13, an immense crowd gathered in front of the residence of Brig.-Gen. Emory, commanding defences of New-Orleans. The General was loudly cheered, and in response to repeated calls made a few remarks. He said the Mississippi was now in our possession, and will never be abandoned. He referred in patriotic terms to the recent glorious victories of our arms, and in conclusion, called upon them to give three cheers for the officers and soldiers of the army and navy, who have achieved our success. The cheers were given with a will, the band played the National airs, and the torch-light procession moved off, to display their enthusiasm in other parts of the city.

MEDICAL.

AFFLICTED RESTORED! IGNORANCE EXPOSED! FALLACIES UNMASKED!

HIGHLY IMPORTANT TO BOTH SEXES, married or single, in health or disease. Dr. LARMONT'S Paris, London and New-York Medical Adviser and Marriage Guide, (76th edition. 4 0 pages, nearly 100 Anatomical Illustrations,) upon Mental and Nervous Debility, Urinary Deposits, Involuntary Loss of Semen, Impotency, Affections of the Bladder and Kidneys, Genito-Urinary diseases and their consequences, the anatomy of the sexual organs of the male and female; latest researches in physiology; European hospital practice; quacks, their recipes and specifics: the author's unequaled Paris and London treatment, &c. Mailed free for $1, closely sealed.

All who would avoid unsuccessful and barbarous treatment with Mercury, Copaiba, Injections, Cauterizations, Quack Specifics, Antidotes, Instruments, &c., should purchase this original work, of DR. WARNER, No. 4 Vesey-st., S. TOUSEY, No. 121 Nassau-st., LANDON, No. 88 Lake-st., Chicago; or consult the Doctor. No. 647 Broadway, (upstairs,) New-York, from 9 A.M. to 6 P.M., except Saturday and Sunday.

"I co concur with other papers in recommending Dr. LARMONT and his work."—Courrier des Etats Unis, German the Reform, Dispatch, Staats Zietung, Atlas, Medical Review, &c.

PRIVATE DISEASES CURED IN THE shortest possible time, by Dr. WARD & CO., No. 49 Lispenard-st., near Broadway, without the use of Mercury, loss of time or change of diet. Dr. WARD, from the hospitals of London, Paris and Edinburgh, is the discoverer of the only certain and reliable remedies for diseases of a private character. In 25 years' practice he has cured more cases of Secret Diseases and Wrong Treatment than all others combined. I can and will cure you in less time and expense than any one can or will, and those who have been robbed of their money and health, call; it will take but little money and time to restore you. If you have been unfortunate, call at once. By his special experience in this much neglected branch of medical science, he is enabled to guarantee a cure in the most complicated cases. Recent cases of Gonorrhœa or Syphilis cured in a few days, without change of diet or hindrance from business. Secondary Syphilis—the last vestige eradicated without the use of Mercury. Involuntary emissions stopped in a short time. Sufferers from Impotency or loss of the sexual power restored to full vigor in a few weeks. Permanently and speedily cured by a new treatment. Persons at a distance failing to receive prompt treatment elsewhere here, may get a permanent cure effected by writing a full diagnosis of their case, addressed to Dr. WARD, No. 49 Lispenard-st., the only place. Call, send or write.

SURE CURE—BY DR. POWERS, SUCCESSfully consulted with Dr. WARD, No. 49 Lispenard-st. Conducted on the plan of the hospital des Veneriens, Paris, where those afflicted with any form of private disease can receive prompt treatment, without risk or exposure, viz.: Syphilis, gonorrhœa, gleet, strictures, ulcers, tumors, cancers, secondary and constitutional syphilis, diseases of the kidneys, &c., &c. Thirty years of extensive practice, exclusive y devoted to the treatment of these complaints, enables me to effect cures in cases where others of less experience have failed. Dr Powers' Essence of Life restores the vigor of youth in four weeks. This marvelous agent restores manhood to the most shattered constitution—phy cal disqualifications, impediments to marriage, thereby speedily cured. The men to consult, Drs. Ward and Powers, the champions and leaders of venereal diseases, possessing the most certain, speedy and only effectual remedies in the world, guarantee a perfect cure, or no charge, in from one to three days. Established in 1840. N B—Those who have used their preventives are never with it. Send for a circular. To Ladies.—Dr. Powers' Periodical Drops are a safe and certain remedy for monthly irregularities. The above remedies sent by mail. The afflicted should read their circular. Postage free, on receipt of a stamp. Cures warranted.

MANHOOD AND THE VIGOR OF YOUTH regained in three days by Dr. POWERS ESSENCE OF LIFE. This wonderful agent restores manhood to the most shattered constitution, radically curing Seminal Weakness, Sexual Debility, and impediments to marriage generally; Nervousness, Mental and Physical Incapacity resulting from self-abuse, &c. The time required to cure the most inveterate case is one week. Failure is impossible. This life-restoring remedy should be taken by all about to marry, as its effects are permanent. Young men, are you subject to that soul and body destroying disease, secret habits? Dr. POWERS' Invigorating Essence is a never-failing cure. Sold by WALTER POWERS, M. D., No. 50 Lispenard-st., between Broadway and Church-st., New-York.

DR. COBBETT, MEMBER OF THE N. Y. University, (Medical College,) and Royal College of Surgeons, London, has removed from No. 19 Duane-st. to his present very convenient suite of offices at No. 22 Centre-st., between Chambers and Reade sts., with a private entrance at No. 6 City Hall-place, where he can be consulted with the most honorable confidence on all diseases affecting the urinary organs. Thirty years in his present specialty, three of which have been at the Hospitals of this City, enable him to guarantee a cure in every case undertaken, or make no charge. Strictures of the urethra, impotency, seminal weakness, &c., treated on the most scientific principles. Dr. C.'s qualifications in the world call special attention to his Diplomas, which can be seen in his office.

IMPORTANT TO THE MARRIED AND those about to be married.—Dr. A. M. MAURICEAU, Professor of Diseases of Women, has just published the 160th edition of the valuable book, entitled "THE MARRIED WOMAN'S PRIVATE MEDICAL COMPANION," strictly intended for those whose health or circumstances forbid a too rapid increase of family. Price $1. Sold at his office, No. 129 Liberty-st., New-York; or sent by mail, free of postage, to any part of the United States and Canada, by inclosing $1, and addressing Box No. 1,224 New-York City. For sale by H. RICHARDSON, at No 1 Vesey-st., (Astor House,) and No. 18 Ann-st.; FEDERHEN & CO., 13 Court-st., Boston

DR. COOPER, NO. 14 DUANE-ST., MAY BE confidently consulted on all diseases of a private nature. A practice of 30 years, devoted to the treatment and cure of Syphilitic, Mercurial and diseases of a delicate nature, enables Dr. C. to make speedy and permanent cures, no matter of how long standing the case may be. Strictures of the urethra and seminal weakness, brought on by a secret habit, effectually cured. The victims of misplaced confidence, who have been misled by quack advertisements, can call on Dr. C. with the certainty of being radically cured. N. B.—Dr. C. is a qualified physician and surgeon, and a member of the College of Physicians and Surgeons of New-York. Office hours from 8 A. M. to 9 P. M.

DR. HUNTER'S RED DROP RESTORES the vigor of youth in four days. Restores manhood to the most shattered system. No 3 Division-st., New-York, the only place. Beware of bogus Dr. Hunters. The City is full of knaves, up to every trick to rob him of his great reputation as a skillful and reliable physician. No other office but No. 3 Division-st. Established in 1834. Eight separate rooms and a private entrance.

DR. POWERS' PERIODICAL DROPS are designed for both married and single ladies, and are the very best thing known for the purpose, as they will bring on the monthly sickness in cases of obstruction from any cause, and after all other remedies of the kind have been tried in vain. Expressly for obstinate cases. Warranted as represented in every respect, or the price will be refunded. Beware of imitations. Purchase directly of Dr POWERS, 50 Lispenard-st., New-York

DR. WARD'S MAGICAL INVIGORATORS. IN the form of Pills, will, in fifteen minutes after being taken, make the recipient as vigorous as if nature had never been retarded or debilitated. To the unmarried or single, in every physical exigency, this unrivaled medicine is earnestly recommended as a complete restorative of the nervous system where manhood has been impaired. Procured of Dr. WARD, No. 49 Lispenard-st., between Broadway and Church-st. Call or send for circulars.

SOMETHING FOR EVERY LADY.—DR. WARD'S Great Female Benefactor or Golden Regulating Pills. Infallible in correcting, regulating and removing all obstructions, from whatever cause, and they will never disappoint the anxious patient. Office No. 49 Lispenard-st., near Broadway, where Dr. WARD can be consulted, confidentially, day and evening.

DRS. DE FORREST AND BROOKS, NO. 130 Franklin-st., New-York, (near West Broadway,) may be successfully consulted by ladies and gentlemen, in all cases of a delicate nature; twenty years' practice in this branch of the profession; charges low. No lady or gentleman who may be afflicted should hesitate to at once call on them. Several private rooms.

ADVICE TO LADIES.—IN ALL CASES where infallible medicines are desired, or mode of treatment that never fails, call upon Dr. A. M. MAURICEAU, Professor of Diseases of Women, author of "The Married Woman's Private Medical Companion," who treats female complaints exclusively. Office No. 129 Liberty-st.

PRIVATE CONSULTATION.—DR. HUNTER has for thirty years confined his attention to diseases of a certain class, in which he has treated no less than fifty thousand cases without an instance of failure. His great remedy, HUNTER'S RED DROP, cures certain diseases when regular treatment and all other remedies fail; cures without dieting or restriction in the habits of the patient; cures without the disgusting and sickening effects of all other remedies; cures in new cases in less than six hours; cures without the dreadful consequent effects of mercury, but possesses the peculiarly valuable property of annihilating the rank and poisonous taint that the blood is sure to absorb unless his remedy is used. That is what he claims for it, and what no other will accomplish. Its value in this respect has become so well known, that scientific men in every department of medical knowledge begin to appreciate it, for hardly a week passes that he is not consulted by druggists, chemists and physicians in regard to some pitiful patient who has exhausted the whole field of the faculty, and still the disease will appear. Its popularity is so great that there is not a quack doctor in the City that has not attacked it, and when they find their lies are not so easily swallowed, they then pretend that they can make it. It is $1 a vial, and cannot be obtained genuine anywhere but at the old office, No. 3 Division-st. Book for 15 three-cent stamps, 300 pages, 100 colored illustrations. The best work out.

BUSINESS CHANCES.

TO CAPITALISTS.—A GENTLEMAN WHO has had fifteen years experience as a sugar planter and boiler in the West Indies and Louisiana, conducting some of the largest plantations, and being well acquainted with the system of free labor, would be glad to make an arrangement with a gentleman about to embark in sugar planting in the South. 1,000 gallons mixed PICKLES, in ten-gallon kegs: each keg to contain six gallons medium-sized cucumbers, two gallons green peppers, and two gallons onions.

Separate proposals must be made for each article enumerated, and bidders may propose for the whole or any part of each.

Samples of all the articles, as well as of tins, packing-paper, &c., must be delivered with the proposals, and referred to therein. Samples of Flour, Corn-meal, Beans, Peas, Rice, Hominy, Tea, Sugar, Candles, Salt, Pepper and Dried Fruit must be in neat boxes of card-board or tin, fully labeled, and not in paper parcels.

Each bid must have a printed copy of this advertisement posted at its head, and must be specific in complying precisely with all the terms. Each bid, to have consideration must contain the written guaranty of two responsible names, as follows:

"We, the undersigned, hereby guarantee that should all or any part of the above bid be accepted, it shall be duly fulfilled according to its true purport and conditions; also, that a written contract, with bonds to the amount of one-fourth the value of the stores proposed to be furnished, shall be executed, if required.

The seller's name, place of business and the date of purchase, as well as the sale of occasion, with gross and net weights, and shipping marks, in the barrelled or designated, must be plainly marked on every package. All other old marks must be obliterated.

Certificates of inspection by professional packers or inspectors, other than the party furnishing the provisions, will be required for the hams, certifying as to the part of the seller their present quantity and condition. The hams will also be examined and passed upon by Robert P. Getty, Inspector on the part of the United States.

The Flour will be inspected at the date of delivery, and compared with the retained samples, by Henry Shields, President of the Association of Flour Inspectors, whose certificate will be required.

All the stores will be carefully inspected before their delivery, and compared with the retained samples. Returns of weights, signed by a professional Public Weigher, must be furnished whenever required.

Payment, as heretofore, to be made in such funds as may be furnished by the United States.

Contractors are expected to hold their goods, without expense to the United States, until required for shipment.

Blanks for Proposals will be furnished at this office, which must be inclosed in an envelope addressed to the undersigned, and indorsed "Proposals for Subsistence Stores."

THE BEST SOAP IN USE.

E. MORGAN'S SONS'

PEARL

MOTTLED SOAP.

This Soap is, without doubt, the best and cheapest in use. It is manufactured from the best materials; and being entirely free from any of those injurious substances so often found in soap, we do not hesitate to pronounce it unequaled for washing flannels and fine goods, or for family use of any kind. We have several other qualities of soaps which give the most unqualified satisfaction wherever used. Our house has been established upward of fifty years, and has a wide reputation for manufacturing only from the best materials.

The steamship Scotia, from Liverpool on the 18th via Queenstown on the 19th inst., was boarded by the newspeat of the Associated Press at 10 o'clock this evening, and a summary of her news obtained.

The dates per the Scotia are one week later.

The steamship City of Manchester, from New-York, arrived at Queenstown on the 16th inst.

The steamship Bremen, from New-York, arrived at Southampton on the 16th inst.

The steamship Canada, from Boston, arrived at Queenstown on the 19th instant.

The steamship Hecla, from New-York, arrived at Queenstown on the 19th instant.

There is great anxiety to know the final result of the battles between MEADE and LEE. The English journals accord praise to the Union troops.

The Morning Post says, except at Antietam, they never showed more steadiness.

The Daily Telegraph thinks MEADE entitled to more credit than any Federal commander, he having, at a blow, altered the character of the conflict.

The Times does not yet see ground for Mr. LINCOLN'S hopeful anticipations. The principal struggle is to come. Looking at Vicksburgh and Port Hudson as well as at Pennsylvania, the Times estimates the chances as heavily against the Federals.

The Times says Mr. EVARTS, who visited London to assist Mr. ADAMS in international questions, returns home in the Scotia. The belief is that his presence has been useful, and that he has conducted his mission with satisfaction to all parties.

In the House of Commons, Lord CECIL asked whether compensation would be granted to Capt. BLAKELY for the detention of the steamer Gibraltar, late Sumter, and complained that the Government allowed themselves to be made the tool of Mr. ADAMS.

Mr. GLADSTONE said the Government were not aware that Capt. BLAKELY had sustained any injury by the detention, and he repudiated the idea of the Government being influenced by pressure from the American Minister.

The Paris journals publish a dispatch to the Emperor recording Gen. FOREY'S entry into the City of Mexico. The inhabitants are represented as enthusiastic for France and French intervention. The keys of the city in silver were offered to the Emperor by the municipality in an address to Gen. FOREY.

In Russia imperial decrees have been issued directing, in view of the present state of affairs, a fresh levy of troops in November.

PARIS, Sunday, July 19.

The Memorial Diplomatique, announcing the Russian reply, states that the notes of the Three Powers were the minimum to which they could consent.

The Memorial Diplomatique, in a telegram from Vienna, states that the reply of Prince GORTSCHAKOFF does not entirely respond to the expectations of Austria, who will immediately consent to ulterior measures with the Western Powers for attaining their common purpose.

The Moniteur announces that France has demanded from the Italian Government the surrender of the five brigands at Genoa, saying that the arrest constituted a violation of French rights.

The Pays believes that Russia's acts are not altogether satisfactory. The Western Powers still adhere to their programme.

FROM PANAMA.

The Attempted Revolution in Ecuador—The United States of Colombia—The Isthmus.

Correspondence of the New-York Times.

PANAMA, Friday, July 17, 1863.

The British mail steamer Guayaquil, from Guayaquil and intermediate ports, arrived here on the 15th inst. This steamer brings the following:

FREIGHT.—For Southampton—3 serroons hats, 1 case hats, 202 bales bark. For Liverpool—1 box merchandise, 907 bags cacao, 335 bales India rubber, 288 bales bark, 2 cases hats. For New-York—471 bags cacao, 25 bales orchilla, 67 bales India rubber, 181 hides. For Manzanilla—309 bags cacao. For Punta Arenas—2 serroons hats. For Panama—710 bags cacao, 20 bags rice, 15 serroons hats, 18 sacks starch, 104 pieces lumber, 115 bales tabaco, 45 bales India rubber, and 6 packages assorted merchandise.

SPECIE.—For England—5 pkgs., valued, $18,600. For Panama—9 pkgs., valued, $11,752 40. For New-York—1 ditto, $256. Total, $30,608 40.

There is not a word of news from Ecuador by this arrival. The revolution which was attempted, and of which you have been before advised, seems to have been entirely forgotten. Our latest advices from the interior of the United States of Colombia, represent that all is quiet and the usual industries of the country being carried on successfully. The gold mines especially are yielding very largely.

The Archbishop of Bogota has given in his adhesion to the new Government, and acknowledged the right of the State to regulate its affairs without the interference of the Church.

This action will probably put an end to the disgraceful struggle maintained by the priests for supremacy in the political affairs of the country.

The last and most desperate of the honorable fraternity of the chain-gang were turned loose in our streets under the recent pardoning act of the Legislature, on the 11th inst., and in consequence the citizens of Panama are feeling quite insecure in the matters of property and life. If the Legislature can only be induced to pass such an act every year, this will be a glorious country for cut-throats and thieves of every description. As it is, there is little enough of security for a respectable man's rights even now.

The Legislature is still in session, and to all appearances may remain so until the terms of its members expire.

From San Francisco.

SAN FRANCISCO, Saturday, July 25.

Business dull during the entire fortnight now closed. No improvement is looked for before the middle of August, as generally we have several dull weeks between the Spring and Fall trade. The price of new wheat seems established at 1¾c. ₱ lb. The wool is mostly marketed. Mining stocks are active; Gould & Curry, $5,600 per foot; Ophir, $2,000. The second monthly dividend of $150 per foot has been declared by the Gould & Curry. A new silver mining district has been discovered in Nevada, 70 miles north of the Reese's River Mines, which promises to be extensive and valuable. About sixty claims have been taken on a ledge resembling the Great Comstock Mine, of Washoe.

DEATH OF HON. JOHN J. CRITTENDEN.

FRANKFORT, Ky., Sunday, July 26.

Hon. JOHN J. CRITTENDEN died at 3½ o'clock this morning, without pain or struggle, in the full possession of his faculties. Disease, general debility. Age 77 years.

AN ERROR PROMPTLY RECTIFIED.—A few days ago the foreign news bag of the Associated Press, which was sent from this City to Boston, to go out in one of the Cunard steamers, was, through a blunder committed in the office of the Association at Boston, placed on the train for New-York, instead of the steamer. The blunder was not discovered until the bag had reached Worcester, about an hour before the time of the departure of the steamer. Here was a dilemma, for there was no down train for several hours, while the bag contained most important, exclusive intelligence for the European Associated Press, beside several hundred private commercial dispatches for all parts of Europe. The telegraph, however, was resorted to, through which the Superintendent, at Worcester, of the Railroad, was informed of the difficulty. The result was that a special locomotive was dispatched to Boston with the unlucky bag, which was delivered in Boston within fifty minutes after its arrival in Worcester, and in ample time to be placed on board of the steamer. The incident is worth noting as an evidence of the promptness of movement, as well as the accommodating disposition of the Superintendent alluded to.

VALLANDIGHAM AND VICKSBURGH.—The Chicago Tribune publishes an intercepted letter, dated near Shelbyville, Tenn., from L. B. MCFARLAND, an officer in Gen. BRAGG'S army, which contains the following important confession of Mr. VALLANDIGHAM:

"In my humble opinion, this feat of GRANT'S in going to Jackson, so far from Vicksburgh, and cutting off reinforcements for that garrison, preventing the accumulation of an army within striking distance of the place—then suddenly attacking Vicksburgh—to take it either by assault or siege, before a force could be brought to turn for a rescue, be it a success or defeat, is the most brilliant campaign the enemy have yet planned during the war.

The fate of the whole North depends upon the fall of that place. Every exertion will be used to that effect. If defeated, the war will end. If successful, not until the end of the present Administration. Vallandigham said, when here, that his election depended upon the fate of Vicksburgh."

The Funeral of Maj. McCook.

CINCINNATI, Sunday, July 26.

The funeral of Maj. DANIEL MCCOOK, better known as the "father of the fighting McCooks," took place this afternoon. The procession was lengthy and imposing, in which were Gen. BURNSIDE and Staff, Maj.-Gen. COX and Staff, the heads of the different military departments of this city, five companies of infantry, the Free Masons and the City Council. Maj.-Gen. MCCOOK, Col. DAN. MCCOOK and Capt. MCCOOK, of Gen. ROSECRANS' Staff, were in attendance.

THE WAR IN THE SOUTHWEST.

Reported Burning of Jackson, Miss., by Our Forces.

The Pursuit of Johnston at an End for the Present.

CAIRO, Sunday, July 25.

Passengers who arrived here to-day from Vicksburgh, report that our forces have burned Jackson, and that the pursuit of JOHNSTON is at an end for the present.

A steamer arrived this morning, bringing New-Orleans papers of the 16th. They were brought by the Imperial from New-Orleans to Memphis, that steamer having made the trip down and back without trouble.

One hundred and two rebel officers, from Port Hudson, arrived this morning. They are waiting orders from the Secretary of War.

GARRISON and his cavalry have arrived at Memphis.

ST. LOUIS, Sunday, July 26.

Specials from Memphis, 23d, give the particulars of the occupation of Jackson, Miss. On the 15th, portions of our forces under Gen. PARKE made an attack, and were met by a legion of new recruits from South Carolina, who, after an engagement of half an hour, retreated with a loss of 300. Our men occupied their position till the next morning, when they made a second advance and discovered the rebels had evacuated, setting fire to a number of houses containing commissary and quartermaster's stores, which were entirely consumed, with the addition of some forty other buildings, ignited from the houses fired by the rebels. The city was at once occupied by Gen. SHERMAN, who sent cavalry to interrupt communication and prevent the army of JOHNSTON from joining BRAGG, which, it was supposed, he would endeavor to do. The rebel army left but little behind; so deliberately had they left the place that they took all their sick with them.

Deserters are continually coming in from JOHNSTON'S army. They express themselves dissatisfied with the shape the campaign is taking, willing to throw down their arms, and take the oath of allegiance to the Federal Government. The loss in the various skirmishes and assaults amounted to 900 men.

But few people were found in the place, most of them foreigners. PEMBERTON was cursed liberally as a traitor and unworthy of confidence.

At Vicksburgh the Federal works were being leveled, and the rebel fortifications put into more perfect condition. A number of the finest guns are being mounted, and the place is held as a first-class military fortification.

LATER.

By the arrival of the steamer Imperial we have advices from New-Orleans to the 17th, Port Hudson 19th, and Vicksburgh 21st.

The Imperial was the first steamer to New-Orleans, having arrived on the 16th. On her arrival the landing was crowded to suffocation with people. It was almost impossible to convince them that Vicksburgh and Port Hudson had fallen.

A large number of prisoners, captured at Port Hudson, are joining the Federal army.

All is quiet at Vicksburgh.

The New-Orleans Picayune quotes Gold 135, Exchange on New-York 150, Sterling 163.

GEN. LOGAN AT CAIRO.

CAIRO, Sunday, July 26.

Maj.-Gen. LOGAN and Col. RAWLINGS, of Gen. GRANT'S Staff, arrived here to-day. They report that Gen. SHERMAN had returned to Jackson. He reports to Gen. GRANT that the leading citizens of Jackson and the surrounding country have implored him to take some action by which Mississippi may be restored to the Union. Both the army and people of that section are completely dispirited, and are ready for peace. They staked their all on Vicksburgh, and it has fallen. They cling to JOHNSTON as a last hope, and he is utterly vanquished. Gen. LOGAN was received here with many marks of respect.

AFFAIRS AT CORINTH.

RESIGNATION OF MAJ.-GEN. OGLESBY.

Maj.-Gen. OGLESBY has resigned command of the left wing, Sixteenth army corps, Army of the Tennessee, in consequence of the effects of a severe wound which he received in the battle at Corinth, in October last. Gen. DODGE succeeds him. Gen. OGLESBY has issued the following farewell order:

GENERAL ORDERS, No. 21.—Continual pain, resulting from physical infirmity, assures me that I am not able faithfully to discharge the duties of the high position given me by the President of the United States.

I have, therefore, tendered my resignation as a Major-General of United States Volunteers. In taking leave of a command, with a portion of which I have been so long and so intimately associated, I may be excused for indulging in the expression of feelings, which have grown into sentiments of the most ardent attachment.

It will be remembered by them also that I have never officially reported the part taken by the Second brigade of the Second division of the Army of the Tennessee, in the terrible battle fought on the 3d day of October, A. D. 1862, at Corinth. Now for them, let me do something like justice to the devoted courage of the soldiers of the "Ninth," "Twelfth" and "Sixty-sixth" Illinois, and "Twenty-second" and "Eighty-first" Ohio Volunteers, and to Messrs. CHETLAIN, BURKE, WOOD and MORTON, their able and worthy commanders; to Col. MERSY, as the command of the brigade fell upon him when I left the field.

It must be recorded of those soldiers that no men ever fought more daringly, when in the final charge on Friday afternoon. They actually drove three times their number of stubborn men fairly from the field, and from the high road to Corinth, than not one-half mile distant.

I shall always believe that nothing but the desperate fighting of the Second division of the Army of the Tennessee, on the main Chewalla road, saved Corinth from the possession of the enemy on Friday afternoon, for which I shall never cease to thank you, fellow-soldiers. I part with you with much regret. I have known your sufferings, and with pride have witnessed your devotion to our common and noble cause. You have endured one hardship to encounter another; have gone from one field of victory to another of blood, and have at all times felt and so acted as to satisfy good men that you had honor and a country at stake, and have hesitated at no risk to save either. Your country must love you. Your country does love you. The world in all time to come will honor you. Reverence for you must be eternal. The obscure soldier, who toils through this war, will have an unwritten but an unforgotten history, an ever present conscience repaying him with its rich rewards.

Faithful soldier, thou hast served thy country well. I shall never forget you, nor shall I abate my efforts to sustain you at home. That man in the loyal States who is not thought and soul for you, for the Union, and for the war, is no friend of mine, is no true friend of humanity anywhere. I reflect with just pride upon the names of those gallant officers who have led you to battle, sometime under my command. How much the country owes them; how much they are to be honored; the discreet and indefatigable DODGE, SWENNEY, MERSY, BANE, RICE, MITNER, MCCRILLIS, HAVEN, CORNYN and PHILIPS. Amongst those of former days I well remember LOGAN, MCARTHUR, RAWSON, LAWLER, the lamented WALLACE, and others equally worthy. With such men to lead and inspire you we cannot fail. The proud army of the Great West, with scarcely a reverse, presents to the nation a bouquet of victories worthy the gratitude and admiration of the whole people.

You may well say, this war cannot last much longer. You, who have seen traitors with haughty pretension crouch at your feet for mercy; the mansions of the domineering rich turned into boarding-houses, and the chivalry turned landlord and lady for the entertainment of Yankee officers. Those who have spurned, beg for favors at your hands, and swearing a new allegiance for protection to property, meanly violate it to serve a rebel. It is fit and proper that such a people, who foolishly wage such a war, should at last meet face to face the black race of the South, bend to the rod of the slaves they have so long outraged, and tremble before the men proclaimed by them to have no rights. A just retribution, one they cannot avoid; the humiliation their own bold treason has brought upon them; a resort that needs no justification in the sight of God or man, for it is right.

R. J. OGLESBY, Major-General.

The Turf.

TROTTING MATCH OF FASHION COURSE.

A remarkably exciting trotting match between three private road horses took place on Saturday, on the Fashion Course. It was for a sweepstakes of $300, mile heats, best two in three, and so evenly was the race contested that it was not decided till the conclusion of the sixth heat. The favorite at the start was a brown mare named Biddy McGee, at four to one, and she showed some fine action, but proved to be rather unfortunate in her breaking. The other horses were a sorrel stallion named Wm. Miner, and the gray gelding Thunder.

In the first heat the mare proved so unsteady that she came in last—Miner winning by five lengths.

Second Heat—The mare won by ten lengths, Miner second by only half a length in front of Thunder.

Third Heat—Biddy won by a dozen lengths, with Thunder second and Miner a length behind.

Fourth Heat—Almost every one felt certain that Biddy could win, and after several false starts one of the judges advised her driver to take the word, even if he was two or three lengths behind, which he did when full two lengths behind. The consequence was that with this lead—although it was rapidly closing up—Thunder took the inside, Miner also kept close to him, and Biddy's driver steered outside of all as they swung into the first turn, challenging for the lead. A pretty race took place to the quarter pole, where Miner fell off, and a neck-and-neck race took place over the back stretch till nearing the half mile, when Biddy showed her neck in front, and increased her lead to fully ten lengths in going round the three-quarter turn, when she broke up badly, and again on the homestretch, coming in more than a dozen lengths behind Thunder, who was six lengths ahead of Miner.

The driver of Biddy made a great mistake in making the circuit outside both the other wagons in going round the first turn. If he had trailed his mare behind Thunder for the first quarter he would not only have traveled a shorter distance, but have collared Thunder after Miner was shaken off and at the same time saved Biddy for the challenge on the back stretch without distressing her so early in the heat.

The result was that Thunder won the fifth and sixth heats, Biddy coming in second and third, to the great chagrin of her owner's friends.

The Monitor Lehigh.

The Lehigh, the last of the nine iron-clads finished, has arrived at the Navy-yard from Hampton Roads. She was built at Chester, Pa., and carries one 11-inch Dahlgren and one fifteen-inch Rodman gun, and is considered the best of her class. The Lehigh is in command of Capt. JOHN C. HOWELL, a brave and accomplished officer, and has seen service, having been engaged in blockade duty at Hampton Roads, in the shelling of the batteries at the mouth of Nansemond River, and of Fort Powhattan, James River. While engaged at the latter, the fifteen-inch Rodman gun was exploded, in consequence of the premature explosion of a shell with which it was loaded. Fortunately Capt. HOWELL'S sagacity and foresight availed here to save life and other destruction, for the gun was provided with a composition ring, and instead of being burst into fragments, it was only split, with no damage to men or vessel. The Lehigh comes here for a new gun, which will be speedily furnished.

Arrest of a Professional Thief.

RECOVERY OF $3,000 STOLEN DURING THE RIOTS.

At a late hour last evening, Detective FARLEY arrested a man who gave his name as CHARLES SMITH. He is well known to the Police authorities as a professional thief. During the late riots he has operated very extensively, in company with others, along the streets, robbing citizens at all hours of the night. On Tuesday night, the 14th inst., at about 12 o'clock, Mr. THOMAS LANIGAN, a drover, was passing up the Bowery, when SMITH accosted him, and before he could answer, he was knocked down by the prisoner and his party, and robbed of the sum of $790 in money, one check for $783, and another for $700, both of which were duly certified and stamped. The thieves also robbed him of a promissory note of $2,000. Mr. LANIGAN was very glad to escape with his life. As soon as possible after the occurrence he lodged information with the Chief of the Detective force at Police Headquarters, and the description which he gave of SMITH led to his arrest last night. Detective FARLEY has been actively engaged for several days in working up the case. He was taken into custody while he was regaling himself at a lager bier shop in the Bowery. He was conveyed to Police Headquarters and searched. The note and checks above mentioned were found on his person, and subsequently identified by Mr. LANIGAN. The money was of course missing. The accused will be taken to the Tombs, this morning, for examination.

Burning of a Church in Williamsburgh.

The church for colored people in Devoe-street, Williamsburgh, was burned on Saturday night, between 12 and 1 o'clock. The church is the same that was threatened by a Williamsburgh mob during the week of the riots in this City. The fire was the work of incendiaries, three men being seen to leave it just before the fire was discovered.

Half an hour after the above fire, another broke out in the varnish factory in North Eighth-street, near Union-avenue. It was entirely destroyed. Origin of the fire unknown.

Reopening of the Union Course.

TROTTING MATCH FOR $1,200 BETWEEN HENRY CLAY AND NUTWOOD.

The first match, since the new fence has been put up round the Union Course, takes place on Thursday, when the celebrated black stallion Henry Clay, with wagon and driver to weigh 300 pounds, will trot against the almost equally celebrated black gelding Nutwood, wagon and driver to weigh 250 pounds.

MERCHANTS' RELIEF DEPOT FOR COLORED PEOPLE.—Mr COLYER, the Secretary, aided by ten others, find it impossible to dispense funds, &c., to all of both sexes who daily attend the depot No. 350 Fourth-street. To-day, only the men will be attended to—to-morrow the women. The hours of consultation with the lawyers are from 8 to 9 o'clock A. M., and from 4 to 5 P. M.

Personal.

—Rev. Jas. L. Vallandigham, (brother of the noted C. L. Vallandigham,) pastor of a Presbyterian church in the vicinity of Newark, Delaware, was arrested, together with Dr. Nathan Hayes Clark, at Newark, on Friday last, by Capt. Thos. M. Wenie, commander of the Provost Guard at Wilmington, Del. The cause of the arrest is not stated, but both of the prisoners took the oath of allegiance and were released.

—The Paris correspondent of the Philadelphia Inquirer writes:

"Apropos of Slidell, I may say that I encountered the hoary sinner in the Bois de Bologne on an afternoon of last week, accompanied by one daughter and a stylish young man, whom I took to be his son-in-law. The daughter was languidly beautiful, and the driver and flunkey were clad in half-livery, with calves and hair powder in profusion. Slidell leaned upon a cane, bevolent as comported with the day, and smiling as if a candidate for glory. His horses were English and full-blooded, and his cabriolet, or barouche, was glossy and light bevond competition. You should see the youths with United States passports, who wait upon Slidell, laughing in their sleeves as they unroll their parchments. One-half the Americans who come here with Government papers are arrant rebels, and many whose lips have freshly sworn to the oath of allegiance, fling up their hats at the mention of a Federal defeat."
